THE HOT SPELL BROKEN

Many Localities Report Falling Temperatures.

FRIGHTFUL RECORD OF DEATHS

Chicago Heads the List, Cincinnati Next—Two Thousand Prostrations Reported.

CHICAGO, July 10.—The fierce heat, under which the greater portion of the country has sweltered since the first of July, moderated in many localities today, and predictions from the weather bureau at Washington indicate that lower temperature will bring general relief within twenty hours. The records of prostrations and deaths resulting from the long heated term approaches in magnitude that of a general epidemic. Reports from all sections of the country received by the Associated Press this evening show prostrations numbering in the neighborhood of 2000, with fatalities close to 350. In addition to this there were scores of deaths resulting indirectly from the intolerable heat, the death rate in many of the large cities showing an increase over previous years. The central states suffered more severely then other sections, the heat being most deadly in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis. In the number of fatalities this city heads the list, with eighty-seven deaths, Cincinnati and suburban points reporting sixty-five and St. Louis forty-two. Throughout the south the heat was intense, but the death rate was much lower than in the north.

CINCINNATI, July 10.—Coroner Haer reports 58 fatal cases of sunstroke during the past seven days. This does not include a dozen fatalities for the week in Covington, Newport and other Kentucky suburbs. There were over 500 prostrations. Today there were seven fatal cases of heat prostrations here.

There are in city hospitals 40 cases of sufferers from sunstroke. There are also a total of 358 cases under treatment, very largely from accidents superinduced by heat. The prostrations requiring official attention today were about 45. The maximum heat marked by the weather bureau today was 93 at 1 p.m. The most reliable instruments on the street level showed 3 to 4 degrees higher. The mercury on the street at 9.30 tonight was 83. Thunder storms cooled the air but little.

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—The hot spell in St. Louis has lasted thirteen days, and the weather is still hot and oppressive. During this heated term forty-two persons have died from sunstroke, either on the streets, in ambulances, or in the emergency hospital. The statistics of prostrated persons who died in their own homes are not attainable. During the hot spell 137 cases of prostration classified as "serious" have been treated at the city hospitals. There is no record of those treated at their own homes. During the thirteen days the heat has averaged 96 degrees. There were no deaths and few prostrations during the first five days.

Today's record of the run in St. Louis up to 6 o'clock tonight is: Dead 14, prostrated 52. Of those prostrated ten are expected to die.

NEW ORLEANS, July 10.—The maximum temperature recorded during the recent heated term in New Orleans, which was broken to some extent by rain, was 97 on June 22d. For several days prior thereto and thereafter, the mercury registered about 90. The actual deaths from heat prostration during that time were fifteen. Many other deaths, particularly of children, were in part due to the heat.

NEW YORK, July 10. The number of deaths in New York city from sunstroke for the week ending at 6 o'clock tonight was 41. There were numerous deaths from heart failure and other diseases hastened by the heat. The report of the bureau of vital statistics for the week ending today gives the number of deaths as 966, an increase of 135 over the week previous.

KANSAS CITY, July 10.—Eight deaths were directly due to the extreme hot weather which prevailed in Kansas City during the past week. Six of these occurred yesterday, though the hottest day of the season was Thursday. During the entire season previous to the past week, there has been three deaths from sunstroke. Today the weather is cool.

LOUISVILLE, Ky, July 10. Since the commencement of the present heated term there have been seventeen deaths in this city and about fifty serious prostrations, all due directly to the intense heat. The average maximum and minimum temperature for the past twelve days were 95.0 and 75.3 respectively.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 10.—Up to 6 o'clock tonight ten deaths and about fifty prostrations as a result of the excessive heat were reported in this city. The highest point reached by the thermometer during the heated term was 99 degrees.

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—Since the beginning of the present heated term there have been reported in this city thirty-two prostrations, of which five proved fatal. The highest temperature reached was 97 degrees on last Sunday.

TOPEKA, Kans, July 10.—The result of the past twelve days extreme heat in this city, during which the temperature reached a maximum of 104 degrees, was twelve prostrations and no deaths so far as reported.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The only death from heat that has occurred in Washington this summer was that of William Carroll, a colored hotel employe, on July 4th.

BUFFALO, July 10.—There have been seven deaths from heat in Buffalo this week. In the past two days there have been five deaths from heat in neighboring towns.

UTICA, N. Y., July 10.—There have been four deaths from the heat during the week.

ROCHESTER, July 10.—There were two deaths from heat this week, both today.

Bryan in Oregon.

ASHLAND, July 10.—W. J. Bryan today delivered an address on bimetallism before the largest audience ever assembled in southern Oregon. His discussion of the financial question was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause. Byran left by tonight's train for the north. He will speak on Monday in Lebanon.

Was He Poisoned?

VISALIA, July 10.—Frederick Steinman, an aged German, who resides near Exeter, died suddenly June 24th, and it is now believed he was poisoned. The coroner intends to exhume the body and have the stomach examined by chemists. The deceased lived with his wife, whom he married last year.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

National Executive Committee Meeting Called.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Herald says: William D. Bynum, chairman of the national Democratic executive committee (goldbug) has called the committee to meet in this city on July 21st, in the national headquarters, this city. Mr. Bynum is well pleased with the action of the gold standard Democrats in Iowa, Kentucky and Ohio, where they will have state tickets.

The national executive committe will make plans for the coming campaign and settle some matters of detail. The gold standard men will nominate a ticket of their own, or indorse Seth Lowe, if Tammany does not repudiate the Chicago platform.

INDUSTRIOUS CONFEREES.

Will Spend Sunday Considering the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The conferees on the tariff bill suspended their labors today long enough to attend the funeral services of the late Senator Harris, but reassembled immediately after the obsequies and continued work. They will work not only tonight, but all day tomorrow.

Drowned in the Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—While bathing in the Sacramento river today the 12-year-old son of Captain Thomas Ryan of the steamer Red Bluff was drowned.

COAL TAKES A JUMP

AS A RESULT OF THE MINERS' STRIKE.

Both Sides Confident of Success. Miners Receive Their Wages Quietly.

PITTSBURG, July 10.—The week closes with the forces engaged in the miners' strike determined as ever, and on the alert to secure the slightest advantage. No openly aggressive work was done today by either side, but the miners' officials had a secret meeting, at which it is believed a vigorous campaign against the New York and Cleveland gas coal miners, to be inaugurated tomorrow, was decided upon. The operators apparently are doing little, and are saying less. However, their confidence in defeating the miners has not abated in the least.

The effect of the strike is being manifested in the price of coal. An increase of 80 cents per ton was shown today when application was made for contracts and a number of Pittsburg operators, not being able to work their mines, are seeking to buy coal in the West Virginia field in order to reap the advantage of the advance.

There has been no intimation of lawlessness as yet in this region, but Sheriff Lowrey of Alleghany county, has anticipated trouble by swearing in 500 deputies, who are in readiness for the field at a moment's notice. At this time such precautions seem like overzealousness. The miners say there will be no overt acts committed, and all proceedings will be strictly within the law.

President Ratchford left the city quietly tonight and will return in time to accompany the men in their demonstration against the New York and Cleveland Company's miners.

The miners on the Wheeling division were paid today for the two weeks ending July 1st, and contrary to expectations there was no disorder at any of the company offices. Nearly $40,000 is said to have been paid at the various mines in Monongahela river and Venetia. The men made their visit to the cashier in a quiet and undemonstrative manner.

Finleyville, which is practically the center of the mines on that division, was as quiet as a country village on Sunday. The practice of deducting rent and store bills was followed to a large extent at the company's offices.

At the majority of the mines it is said the men will be required to pay their month's rent in advance, and whenever this impossible they will be required to vacate the company's houses.

There was a flurry in the coal market today. Before the strike coal was quoted at 70 cents per ton. This afternoon it was difficult to buy at $1.50 a ton. A few of the operators who were on the inside made considerable money. Some of the operators have gone into the brokerage business on West Virginia coal. The Port Royal Commercial Company has bought 300 cars of West Virginia coal and are selling it from $1.10 to $1.50.

WARD HELD TO ANSWER

FOR ADULTERY, AS CHARGED IN THE COMPLAINT.

Bail Fixed at $2000—Defendant's Attorney Planks Down the Greenbacks.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—The proceedings in the Ward case before Police Judge Low today were very brief, but they were full of interest to W. Russell Ward, who ran away with Mrs. John Bradbury of Los Angeles and landed her in jail.

"The case is submitted," said Garrett McEnerney, who represents Ward.

"The defendant is held to answer, as charged in the complaint, with bail fixed at $2000," said the court.

"We have $1000 on deposit, there's the other thousand," said McEnerney, and he threw on the clerk's desk a pile of greenbacks.

During the transactions Ward had remained in his chair, looking like a man in a dream. Just behind him stood the court baliff, whose prisoner Ward became from the moment the court pronounced judgment until bail was accepted.

Mr. McEnerney stated that he would institute habeas corpus proceeding at once. He is now mapping out his plan of campaign and early in the week may decide what to do. Ward's case will not come up for trial in the superior court in any event for about three months. In the first place, the police court testimony must be written up and the information filed with the district attorney. This may be done within a week or two, or it may take a month. Then the case must come up within sixty days from the date on which the information is filed. As the courts will soon close for the summer vacation, the Ward case will doubtless go over until after vacation.

AN EVENING OF RALLIES

Elaborate Receptions Given Endeavorers

AFTER A MOST EVENTFUL DAY

Afternoon Devoted to Recreation. Early Meetings Attended by Vast Throngs.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—This has been one of the most eventful days of the Christian Endeavor convention, for its varied incidents have demonstrated to the delegates from far and near that the people of San Francisco are sincere in their welcome and that this is not a Godless city. This fact was strikingly emphasized at the great open air meetings held on Van Ness avenue at noon. For many blocks the wide boulevard was thronged, and the impassioned addresses of men earnest in their faith were received with marked attention and approval. It was a matter of civic pride, not of creed, for nowhere was the applause more generous than at the great gathering under the shadow of the splendid Roman Catholic church of St. Ignatius. These assemblies, under a cloudless sky on one of the finest days of a Californian year, were even more enthusiastic than was expected, even by General Secretary Baer, through whose suggestion they were held. The topic of the early morning prayer meeting was "Committee Work Service." All the churches were filled. The services were led by men prominent in the Christian Endeavor movement.

Profiting by their experience at the previous sessions of the big convention, when they came too late to get within hailing distance of the Mechanics' and Woodward's pavilions, many Endeavorers were up with the coming of daybreak, determined to be among the fortunate ones in securing seats. All roads seemed to lead to the headquarters at the Mechanics' pavilion. By 8 o'clock they came pouring in from the east, west north and south, on foot and in street cars, until the broad entrances to the big frame structures were congested with humanity. The weather was quite cool—just cool enough to bring back the color which had been temporarily driven from the cheeks of the thousands of pretty young women by the hardships of a transcontinental journey. Nine o'clock saw all of the 9000 seats filled, while several thousand persons formed a fringe of humanity about the outer edges, and packed the aisles, until the police and fire departments cried enough and barred the doors to further arrivals.

The song service was first on the program. The vast throng joined in the stirring Endeavor hymns with delightful effect and with a volume of sound that carried their voices to the crowds in the streets, many of whom joined in the songs of praise.

In spite of the fact that the committee had arranged the most attractive program for the meetings at Woodward's pavilion, in order to draw as many people as possible to that hall, the crowd seemed to gravitate toward the headquarters at Mechanics' pavilion, with the result that thousands are turned away at every session. The latter hall has been made so attractive with decorations and booths, conducted by hundreds of handsome young women, something after the fashion of a charity bazaar, that all want to enjoy the privilege of seeing and hearing all that is to be seen and heard at this place.

The afternoon was devoted chiefly to recreation by the delegates. Enthusiastic as they have been in the work of the convention they cannot deny that a season of rest in the midst of their labors is necessary. Therefore they elected to lay aside more serious things for a time and enjoy themselves as fully as possible.

No definite figures have been given out today as to the total registration, but it is understood that something over 22,000 have appended their names to the roll of attending delegates. Nineteen more trains yet to come, is the latest announcement by Secretary Baer, and the last of these will probably not arrive before Monday. It is estimated that there are between 35,000 and 40,000 in the city at present.

Among the last detachments to arrive was the second of the New York delegation, under the care of Rev. Dr. Charles G. Pease, who not only attended to the traveling comforts, but acted as nurse and physician in more than a few cases. With one exception the trip was free from discomforts or mishaps, and pleasant experiences were scattered throughout the long journey. While crossing the Sierras the roof of one of the sleepers caught fire from forest fires and there was considerable excitement among the delegates until the fire was extinguished.

In the early hours of this morning the last delegation from Pennsylvania arrived, 250 strong, and these, with 1200 other visitors from the Keystone state, who preceded them, swells the total from Pennsylvania to nearly 1500.

This evening was devoted to rallies and gatherings of the various states, mostly moral in character and social as well as religious. The mechanics pavilion was given over to the Californians, who held their tenth annual convention, at which the representatives of the various officers and committees were received and short addresses delivered by many of the leaders of the society in this state.

One of the most elaborate receptions given to the visiting delegates was that tendered to the New Yorkers at Trinity Presbyterian church. The building was beautifully decorated with ferns, smilax and flowers, and in the parlors tables bountifully laden were arranged in the form of the well-known monogram, "C. E." Miss Carrie L. Morton was chairman of the committee of arrangements and Dr. W. J. McKettrick presided. Rev. M. Brush made a short speech of welcome, which was responded to by Rev. George Pentecost. Other speakers were A. E. Denhurst, D. Wilcox and George Leyell.

Illinois was largely in evidence at the First Christian church, where also an elaborate repast was provided. The delegates were introduced to the congregation by Rev. J. T. Nash, and welcomed by the pastor, T. S. Food, Judge Dewey of Chicago, state treasurer, was chairman of the meeting. A short address was made by Rev. M. Stough and the evening was made one of general jollity.

Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and the territories were entertained at Bethany Congregational church. Rev. Dr. Pond welcomed the strangers and there was a pleasant meeting conducted by Miss Violet Lamont. At most of the other churches similar reunions were held.

Miss Emilie Snook, who has been visiting Miss Dora Kirk of this city, returned yesterday on the Valley road train to her home in Oakland.

FUNERAL SERVICES

In the Senate Over the Late Isham G. Harris.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Impressive funeral services over the late Isham G. Harris occurred in the senate chambers at noon today in the presence of President McKinley and members of the cabinet, senators and members of the house, diplomatic corps and officials from all branches of public life. The chamber was elaborately draped for the occasion and the desk of the late senator was heavily bound in crepe, with a scarf thrown over the vacant seat. The casket stood in the semi-circular area immediately in front of the presiding officer, and was literally buried in flowers. Rev. Hugh Johnson, the acting chaplain, delivered an invocation, referring to the long and valuable services of the late Senator Harris, his steadiness of purpose and unfailing rectitude. The services were brief and simple, consisting only of prayers and a short statement by the vice president.

EIGHT PERSONS POISONED.

Ate Chickens That Had Swallowed Green Paint.

FORT DUCHESNE, Utah, July 10.—At midnight last night a man reached this garrison and notified the guard that eight persons had been poisoned from some unknown source and were writhing in agony at their camping grounds, three miles from the post. Surgeon Flagg, with hospital assistants, soon reached the camp and found great excitement among the members of the party. Women and children were suffering with terrible pain and were nearly insane. Dr. Flagg ascertained that these victims were undoubtedly seriously, if not fatally, poisoned. Emetics were administered which brought temporary relief. When questioned as to what they had been eating during the afternoon, they said they had killed and cooked two chickens and eight persons had partaken of the same. Investigation revealed the fact that the chickens had been roaming about in the vicinity of where green paint powder was being used. The victims were brought to Fort Duchesne, where they are now being given medical attention. The party was composed of the family of Seth Pell and friends of Ashley, Utah.

CONDITION OF CROPS

STATISTICS FURNISHED BY DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Wheat Crop Will be Below Average in Great Britain, France and Austria-Hungary.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The July returns to the statistician of the department of agriculture indicate the following average conditions: Corn 82.9, winter wheat 81.2, spring wheat 91.2, combined spring and winter wheat 84.9, oats 87.8, winter rye 95, spring rye 90, barley 85.5, tobacco 78.4, Irish potatoes 87.2.

The report on the acreage of corn, which is preliminary, shows a decrease of one-half percent as compared with that of last year. This represents a decrease of about 1,000,000 acres, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas and one or two less important corn producing states showing an increased acreage, but this is more than offset by the shrinkage in Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and other states. The average condition of corn is only 82.5, or 9.6 points lower than in July of last year. The principal state averages are as follows: Michigan 80, Indiana 83, Illinois 82, Iowa 75, Missouri 92, Kansas 9, Nebraska 82, Texas 101, Tennessee 90, Kentucky 87.

The condition of winter wheat, 81.2, is 2.7 points higher than last month, but 2.1 points lower than in July of last year. The average condition of spring and winter wheat combined is 84.9, and 1.5 points higher than that of the corresponding period last year.

The percentage of the wheat crop of 1896, reported as on hand July 1, 1897, is 5.46. The average condition of the oat crop, 87.5, compares very unfavorably with that of July, 1896, but is only a small fraction of 1 per cent less than the average July condition for the last ten years.

The European agent for the department reports that the weather during June was especially favorable to growing crops, except in Russia and parts of Germany and Italy, but the wheat crop will be below the average in Great Britain, France and Austria-Hungary.

Missing Banker Located.

PORTLAND, Or., July 10. — Antono Pfaner, the banker of Forest Grove, Or., who disappeared about six weeks ago, has been located in Victoria, B.C. L. Huff, the banker's brother-in-law, today informed Captain of Police Berry that he was in a hospital in Victoria, suffering from nervous prostration. Pfaner made an assignment of his property before he left, and an examination of his affairs showed he was solvent and able to pay all creditors in full. It was thought at the time of his disappearance that he had committed suicide while temporarily insane.

Fire at Hollister.

HOLLISTER, July 10. Fire in Jones & Snibley's lumber yard this afternoon burned $4000 worth of timber and sparks ignited Hardin's grain ranch, destroying five acres of wheat. Total loss $6000.

Steamer Crushed by Ice.

VICTORIA, July 10.—A. E. Carr of Seattle arrived from Alaska today and reports the wreck of the Alaska Commercial Company's steamer Arctic, crushed by ice.

IT could hardly have been a case of hypnotism, but possibly Mrs. Bradbury was hoodooed. She acted that way.

IF the new Democracy wants to test the enduring quality of its strength, let it attempt to carry into effect in the next campaign the attacks which its newspapers are now making on a protective tariff.

THE picture of Mr. Bryan taking a bath, which is printed in the Examiner, will be a source of pain to some of his admirers. Roman voluptuaries, in the the decadence of the empire, indulged extensively in this form of dissipation.

IT is stated that Mrs. Dominis has decided to put her claims to queenship in the hands of the Japanese. Well, a japanned queen would not be quite as satisfactory as the genuine article, but it would be quite as charming and useful as a wooden Indian.

THE coal strike appears to be growing, and so long as it is conducted along lawful lines the hope of the public will be that the miners may win. Cheap coal is desirable, of course, but the miners' wages have already been reduced below the bounds of justice.

THE esteemed Examiner gives the enterprise of yellow journalism a hard swipe by reprinting those old pictures of M. H. de Young opening the Midwinter Fair and labeling them Bryan in the Park. At any rate it is the same old crowd and looks as much like the director-general as it does like the captain of the new Democracy.

SOME of the macadam rock being used on street improvements would not pass through "a circular ring three inches in diameter," as the specifications word it. By the way, does anybody know of any other kind of ring than circular?—Stockton Independent.

Yes, indeed. Fresno once had a triangular ring, and rocks of every denomination went through it until there were no more rocks left in the city's rockery.

IT begins to look as though Japan would just as soon have a little trouble with Uncle Samuel as not. Those little brown men in the land of the chrysanthemum are all right in some respects, but their heads have been so badly swollen ever since they succeeded in licking the Chinese that they will never be entirely happy until they get the swelling reduced. They merely need fixing.

IT is a painful thought that "our Steve," after getting nearly everything that he advocated in the new tariff bill, went and played his vote against it in the final show-down. But he wouldn't a-done it if his vote would have been instrumental in defeating the bill. He knows that even his alleged free trade constituents in California would not stand such nonsense. His final vote was cast as a Democrat, not as a representative of the people of this state.

THE pioneers who founded the civilization of the great West did not wait for some transportation company to carry them across the continent, as Mr. Debs and his followers are waiting. Ox teams and the meager equipments of camp life were good enough for them, and most of them had no other capital than their courage and industry. If the socialists have the spirit in them that wins they will not be deterred by difficulties and dangers less formidable than those which were met and overcome by the pioneers who blazed the pathways of civilization while depending entirely upon their own meager resources.

A CHICAGO paper says that "Europeans complain that we have not, even in our mountain districts, any costumes that go with the scenery, but, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, on the mountains, the rivers, and the prairies, in the fields and the workshops, on the railways and the lake steamers, we cling to the dead level of commonplace dress." Evidently the European tourist is not familiar with the picturesque garb of California's noble sons of the forest and of her daughters who ride bicycles in the park. They ought to see some of these startling digressions from the commonplace if they yearn for something in clothes that fits the scenery like a flock of purple ducks on a lake chrome yellow.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WILSON has had some expert comparisons made of American creamery butter with that which supplies the English market from various sources, and the verdict is entirely favorable to the American product. This being the case it only remains to push our dairy product in a business way across the ocean to enlarge a profitable market. In this connection it may again be remarked that Mr. Wilson is evidently the right man in the right place. He finds plenty to do in looking after the interests of American agriculture without instructing the public on questions of finance and political economy. The people can well afford to pay men like Mr. Wilson to look after their interests.

In nothing is Mr. Bryan more conspicuous than in the absence of self-seeking and his strong faith and confidence in the people.—San Francisco Examiner.

Of course Mr. Bryan may not be seeking anything for himself, but it is a fact, we believe, that no protest has been heard from him when he is referred to by his ardent admirers as the next President of the United States. It is stated, indeed, that his expression upon such happy occasions is similar to that of a man who has just received information that the number on his ticket is identical with that which draws the capital prize. All of which is quite natural and not mentioned in any spirit of captious criticism. It merely suggests the thought that absolutely unselfish statesmen are quite rare. There may be one of them left, but most of them are undoubtedly wearing wings.

ACHIEVING SUCCESS.

The American bimetallic commission has secured the diplomatic as well as the moral assistance of France in the work of promoting an international coinage agreement. This is an important step in the right direction and argues well for the final success of that important undertaking.

As this paper has before remarked, it makes all the difference in the world whether this country undertakes seriously, earnestly and honestly to promote international bimetallism, or whether its efforts are merely perfunctory, as they have been in the past. President McKinley has appointed a commission of men who are both earnest and capable, and the substantial encouragement they are receiving is largely due to that fact. Its members will succeed in convincing the other great commercial nations that the United States is moving in this matter with a determination to achieve its purpose, and as a consequence the arguments advanced by them will be given careful and candid investigation.

This important work cannot be accomplished in a month or in a year, but there is good reason for believing that the sentiment favorable to international treatment of the question is growing steadily and that ultimate agreement is not far away. In the meantime it is the plain duty of the American press which is not given over to the advocacy of the single standard to strengthen the hands of the able American commission in every way possible.

The sneers of the Bryanistic newspapers at this time are unfortunate as tending to mislead foreign statesmen regarding the real sentiment in this country upon the question of international agreement, but that simply proves that they would rather see the great undertaking fail than to be deprived by its success of a political issue through which they hope to satisfy their lust for political power. Their attempts to belittle and weaken the position taken by this government should not be permitted to work injury to the cause. Its unworthy purpose is apparent and should be thoroughly exposed.

A TACOMA paper refers in tones which imply reproach to the fact that Philadelphia has built a finer statue for her champion base ball player, Harry Wright, than New York has ever erected to the memory of Alexander Hamilton. This is an apparent reflection upon New York, but it should be taken into consideration that Harry was a cracker-jack, while Alexander didn't even know the first principles of the national game. New York isn't altogether at fault.

THE esteemed evening contemporary grows warm under the collar because Fresno's Christian Endeavor circular omitted mention of the wine industry. It is easy to get hot nowadays.

RANDOM REMARKS.

It is unfortunate that that San Jose boy of sixteen years killed himself because his mother would not let him be out late of nights, but there may be some consolation in the thought that it may be better for him to be dead than to have lived to have his own way. Boys sometimes walk queer paths at late hours of the night.

The climate is perfection here
 Beneath Tulare's skies,
And eastern tourists always are
 Bewildered with surprise.
—Visalia Delta.

And, just to push the ball along
 Before its force is fully spent,
It's fair to say they also are
 Surprised with bewilderment.

It is dollars to nickels, in the beginning, that the great miners' strike will not be successful. This is not to say that it should not, for outside of the sweatshops there hardly is a more meagerly paid class of laborers in the country than these same miners, but a continuance of the strike means to them something like starvation, while to the mine-owners it means little, not even certain loss of property, for cannot the price of coal be raised? To reduce the wages of those underpaid miners was a crime (though it were unknown to law), but every day brings nearer the time when absolutely nothing can be gained by striking.

Down at Los Angeles, while a great crowd was about Mr. Bryan, a woman shouted to him: "Oh, Mr. Bryan, I want to kiss you." At this point the pencil falters, and it seems hard to record that the distinguished Nebraskan did not accept the proposition. But this is the cold and unromantic fact. Not only did he not smack, as requested, but he even failed to waft that spasmodic one a single airy kiss from his fingers. Women who are going to vote some day, and who are looking about for the right men for their ballots, should remember the fact sadly recorded here, that Mr. Bryan did not smack when requested. It is hard to mention it, but the sad truth should be known.

Tesla's New World.

A few hundred feet in the air, just above what is known as the magnetic disturbance of the earth's surface, the electric waves run in long, straight lines. They are called the Hertzian waves, after young Hertz, their discoverer. The waves are, in fact, found everywhere in the air, but up there they can be used without the danger of local disturbance, and Mr. Tesla has, by a long series of experiments, learned to take hold of them and flash a light precisely as a sunbeam is flashed from a mirror. He has learned to throw the electric energy of those waves into a battery and turn a distant machine connected with this battery by wire. Mr. Tesla has a machine in his laboratory, that he calls an oscillator, that generates these waves and projects them into the atmosphere just as nature does. With this oscillator he has succeeded in making every calculation necessary to flash a message without a wire to any part of the earth, or to take the electric waves generated by the great power of Niagara and grind wheat in Argentine, or run the trolley cars in Sydney. This is no longer speculation, but science, and with time and capital such a gigantic scale will be realized.—National Recorder.

Larvae Nests.

By breaking open rotten logs one can find in midwinter the grubs or larvae of many of the wood boring beetles, and beneath logs and stones near the margins of pounds and brooks herdes of the maggots or larvae of certain kinds of flies may often be found huddled together in great masses. The larvae of a few butterflies also live over winter beneath chipper bunches of leaves near the roots of their food plant, or in webs of their own construction, which are woven on the stems close to the buds, whose expanding leaves will furnish them their first meal in spring.—New York Commercial.

Bees as Aids in War.

History records two instances, according to Mr. Whiteley Stokes in the London Athenæum, in which bees have been used in warfare as weapons against besieging forces. The first is related by Appian of the siege of Themiscyra, in Pontus, by Lucullus in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themiscyra dug open these mines from above and through the holes cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals and hives or swarms of bees.

The second instance is recorded in an Irish manuscript in the Bibliotheque Royale at Brussels, and tells how the Danes and Norwegians attacked Chester, which was defended by the Saxons and some Gallic auxiliaries. The Danes were worsted by a stratagem, but the Norwegians, sheltered by hurdles, tried to pierce the walls of the town when "what the Saxons and the Gaedhil who were among them did was to throw down large rocks, by which they broke down the hurdles over their heads." What the others did to check this was to place large posts under the hurdles.

What the Saxons did next was to put all the beer and water of the town into the caldrons of the town and boil them and spill them down upon those who were under the hurdles, so that their skins were peeled off. The remedy which the Lochlans applied to this was to place hides outside on the hurdles. What the Saxons did next was to throw down all the beehives in the town upon the besiegers, which prevented them from moving their hands or legs, from the number of bees which stung them. They afterward desisted and left the city.

Origin of the Passion Play.

According to local tradition, the origin of the Oberammergau Passion play was as follows: When in the year 1633 a deadly plague threatened to depopulate the districts of Partenkirchen, Escheloke and Kohlgrub, which are separated from Ammerthal, or the valley of the Ammer, by a rampart of mountains, the Ammerthalers succeeded for a time in protecting themselves against the dread contagion, but one day a native who had been working all summer at Escheloke evaded the quarantine and entered the Ammerthal by a secret path in order to celebrate an annual church festival with his family. Two days afterward he was a corpse, and in less than three weeks the plague had carried off 84 of the Ammerthalers.

Despairing of all human succor, the terrified survivors addressed themselves to God and registered a solemn vow that if he heard their prayer and removed the scourge they would represent, every ten years, "for thankful remembrance and edifying contemplation, and by the help of the Almighty, the sufferings of Jesus, the Saviour of the world."

Not a single person died of the plague after the vow was made, though many were affected by it. The first representation of the Passion play in fulfillment of the vow of these simple villagers took place at Oberammergau in the following year, and it has been repeated every ten years without a single omission.

She Was Careful.

Spats—That old maid, Miss Van Shelf, is the most careful and methodical boarding mistress I ever had disturbing my den.

Scratchly—Yes, I can imagine when she goes to heaven she will want in the summer time to lay away her wings in camphor balls.—Pittsburg News.

The queen's judgment of pictures has been remarkably accurate, and paintings for which she gave a comparatively small sum a few years ago would now fetch big figures. The value of her pictures by Landseer alone is over £40,000.

MANY PEOPLE AWAY.

Yet the White Front Stores are Crowded Every Day.

It is a remarkable fact that while so many Fresno people, most of them regular customers of the White Front Stores, are away from town, those stores are still crowded and doing a lively business. It is a proof of the immense volume of their trade and the great popularity of the house, that the absence of several thousand buyers does not appreciably diminish the crowds that may be seen in the various departments of that great store. The reason for their popularity is understood by all. Their prices are right. For years they have been selling goods to the people of this valley and always have they been in the lead with the best goods and the lowest prices. The White Front Stores is Fresno's great popular marketing place.*

CLOVIS PARAGRAPHS.

A Wife Beater Beaten—"Ferg" and the Bull Fight.

C. C. Halstead of Sanger was in town Friday. He expects to move his family here next week into the house lately vacated by Mat Jobel, which he intends purchasing from W. A. Hurry, the present owner.

B. K. Smith and wife left Thursday for Pine Ridge, where they will remain a short time to enjoy the gentle zephyrs among the pines.

Mrs. Charles Fraller left on the train Friday to visit friends and relatives in Tulare.

"Dad" Brittan, the popular captain of the REPUBLICANS, journeyed to Fresno Friday to practice with the team, so that he might have an equal show with the others in Sunday's game.

Stebbins, the Clovis wife beater, recently received some of his own medicine while languishing in jail. A few days ago he got into a row with another prisoner in the hobo department of the county jail, and before the jailer could separate them the "other fellow" had impressed upon Stebbins' head and face a souvenir which must have brought to his vivid recollection the days of his former life in Clovis when he was wont to do the impressing.

"Ferg" celebrated the Fourth in Fresno by taking in everything, even the bull fight (?), although he was a little ashamed to let people know he had put up 75 cents and got nothing in return; so he pretended ignorance as to such thing having taken place in Fresno. It wouldn't work, however, for his friends were all asking him the next day what he thought of the bull fight.

The truth seems to hurt our poetical postmaster, C. P. Hone, judging from the card he had in yesterday's REPUBLICAN—a reply, he stated to a paragraph in the "Clovis Cullings" of the day before. But we fail to see wherein it was a reply, as there was nothing said about him having any enemies; but as he has himself proclaimed different citizens to be his enemies, I will state that he has only himself to blame for it, for his bad treatment of and abusive language towards different people since he has been in the government's employ, would cause any man to become unpopular.

A drummer came to town the other day and inquired where he could find one of the leading men of Clovis. He was immediately directed to Judge Butler, who at that time was coming up Front street leading a horse. We did not remain to hear him interrogated.

A reverie by one of our prominent citizens: Why do my horses always stray when you come across the bay?

R. E. L. Good is having an elegant bathroom fitted up in his cottage—a very enjoyable addition, especially at this time of the year.

Death Caused by a Pin.

From the Hanford Sentinel.

May Sullivan, a young woman who lived with her mother in Oakland, died last Monday from the effects of swallowing a pin. Miss Sullivan was an employe of the Hotel Artesia for about two months previous to her illness. She became sick while here and was taken home by her friends. The post mortem examination showed the presence of the pin which had rusted, and the inflammation which resulted caused her death. Her stomach was entirely paralyzed and she suffered great agony.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

Attribute the First Dose to the Weather.

WHEN THE SABBATH COMES

Got His Name and Picture in a Book —Why We are Holding Our Breath, etc.

The weather seems to have been working itself up to a climax, and there is an unpleasant probability that this will be a hot day. And if there is anything in the world that I dread it is a hot Sunday. I used to think it was best when very warm weather came on Sunday, for then, I said to myself, one could seek the coolest place available and lie or sit down and fan oneself and be quite comfortable; but now I know better, for I have observed things and have found out.

On ordinary, unvarnished week days I go down town in the morning, look over the exchanges, come back home, say, "Lord! But its going to be a scorcher!" and begin to write. There I sit and write, and meanwhile the mercury climbs merrily upward in its straight and narrow way which does not lead to Heaven; but I know little about it, for my work has me and I am forgetful of the discomforts and comforts of life. Once in a while, to be sure, I may pause between paragraphs to order another tub to catch the perspiration, but I soon return to that world of the mind where "the stings and arrows of outrageous fortune" so little afflict. Really I do not mind hot weather very much on work days.

But on Sundays it is different. Then I notice the rise of the mercury with an eagerness which has nothing else on which to expend itself. I take a book, go into the dining room and establish myself to read comfortably. Pretty soon I say to my wife, "This infernal dining room is the hottest room in the house," and I remove to the sitting room. As I do so I observe that the thermometer in that room indicates 95 degrees above zero. I try to read again, but how is a man to read when he feels prickly sensations, caused by heat, all over his body? I tell my wife it is a dead sure thing I will have a sunstroke before night, and I offer to bet her the candy that the mercury has raised at least five degrees since I entered the sitting room. She takes the bet, and I go to the thermometer and find it standing at 95½ degrees. Still, a man does not have to pay his debts to his wife; there is consolation in that thought. Why should he? She never pays hers to him.

The better half of me suggests that the northeast bedroom is the coolest room in the house and that comfort may be found there. So we adjourn to that room. Within ten minutes I announce that anybody who says that it is the coolest room in the house does not know what she is talking about and that nobody but a woman would say such a thing, anyway. After my wife has pointed out to me the harshness of this statement I apologize to her by admitting that some men might say such a thing if they did not have sense enough to go in when it rained, and she accepts the apology in the spirit in which it is offered. So it goes. The northwest corner bedroom is hotter than that of the northeast; the porch is an outdoor oven; the kitchen is hottest of all. There is no rest anywhere.

And all this because it is Sunday. Were it any other day I would work right along and hardly give a thought to the weather. And if you will pause to think of it, you will realize—unless your work particularly exposes you to the sun's rays—that it is much the same with you. This Sabbath comfort on a hot day is a myth. Then, more than at any other time, we have opportunity to appreciate the little afflictions of life, and we make a business of grasping the opportunity. May the Lord in His infinite mercy guard us from hot Sundays. They are so much hotter than other days of the week, even if the mercury does insist on registering no higher. They wrench a man's religion and make it wobbly—but not a woman's; nothing affects that.

* * *

When Sabbath comes let's pause a while,
While earth is bright beneath His smile;
Let's fold the weary hands to rest;
Let's banish care from every breast.
On one glad day let life be sweet,
All-beautiful and fair, complete
The morrow's burdens are its own;
Let's live for one sweet day alone,
When Sabbath comes.

We know not what the days shall bring,
Nor if our souls shall weep or sing;
We know the yesterdays are dead,
With all their follies on their head.
But this one day we still may hold;
For us its sunbeams bring their gold,
And we shall lose them save we speed
To garner them in word and deed—
When Sabbath comes.

Oh, weary soul that struggled so
To gain what goal you may not know;
Oh, saddened heart whose love and trust
Have turned to ashes and to dust,
What matters it? This day is thine,
The day down which His glories shine,
And all the past a dream appears,
A phantom from another's years—
When Sabbath comes.

So let's be glad on this one day;
Let's put the brood of care away.
A little time and we shall sleep;
A little time and some shall weep
O'er our poor dust, but not for long.
Behold, the busy, phantom throng
Still hurries on. A little way,
And o'er the hills shall break the day
When Sabbath comes.

If M. J. Church thought it was worth $10,000 to have his name and picture and the story of his deeds immortalized in a book, that is his business. Some of us would give more than $10,000 not to have our deeds recorded in a book (not even the Great Book), but that is our business. And if Mr. Church now concludes that his name and his picture and the story of his deeds are not worth $10,000—well, he has the blessing of the rest of us in that conclusion, for we do not believe that such a record was worth such a sum, either.

But the case nevertheless is a striking one in that it illustrates a phase of human nature. Why should M. J. Church have conceived that it was worth $10,000 to him, or anybody else, to have some record of himself in a book with those of other men who, presumably, also wanted theirs to the extent of some thousands of dollars apiece? Why did he want it? It is true that he is in some respects a remarkable man. He has shown striking talent in some things. He has filled a somewhat prominent station in life with varying success. But the clay of which he was made was not far removed from that of which the rest of us are constructed.

Yet he wanted his name in a book, and he wanted it there $10,000 worth! I say that the case is notable in that it illustrates a phase of human nature. For Mr. Church's absurd and expensive scheme for immortalizing himself was dictated by a characteristic which is common to us all. He wanted to write his name on the shifting sands of time so it would endure for a little time; he wanted to be on a pedestal above the mob for a few minutes, and so do the rest of us. He did not want to be obliterated when he should go down into the shadows, and neither do the rest of us. To be sure, his scheme for perpetuating himself was mightily preposterous, for his name in a thousand money-catching books could not have made him anything other than M. J. Church, one with the rest of us. But if he was foolish, none of us is so wise that he need sit on a box and crow, and perhaps our method of catching the public eye is no wiser than his. I talked with a man the other day who was really and transparently proud because he had lifted a dumb-bell more times than another man. He felt that it put him on a small dumb-bell pedestal, you see. Mr. Church wanted to be on a picture-book pedestal. I want to be on a—Never mind about my pedestal, but how is it about yours? If you are of any earthly good it is one of some sort. Only, as Mr. Church might remark, it is well for us to see that our pedestals are of such a nature that we shall not be laughed at for our pains if we attain them.

Mr. Jeff Robbe and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Robbe, appear to think that it is a pretty good joke to be arrested in the course of an illicit journey. Down in San Francisco are a couple who have been arrested on a plain, unornamented charge of adultery, and they do not appear to be enjoying themselves very much. Now what is the matter with applying a little of that same law to our Fresno pair and seeing if it be not possible to remove the smiles that now wreathe their faces? This vile fellow and his inamorata might as well, or better, be made an example to others of their kind. If one statute fails, give them another. They need a lesson.

We are holding our breath. We want to take off our hats and yell for the REPUBLICAN baseball team, but we will keep them on until after the game today. After that has been decided we will take them off in a hurry or we will —keep them on. Today the REPUBLICAN team plays with one of the few remaining teams which still have an equal chance with it for the Examiner trophy. At this time of writing the Corkers have not been beaten and—S-s-sh! Don't yell yet; wait a while—neither have the REPUBLICANS. Wait till this afternoon and the situation will be clearer. Only, we are expecting to yell.

And so she who was Miss Lillie Hollingsworth is now Mrs. P. S. Vaughn. So it goes. We rear our girls, and they make our lives glad, and our homes are beautiful for their presence; and then —presto!—they are gone, and the homes are bare. So goes the world, I say; and so it went with the mothers before these girls, and with the mothers of the mothers, and so on since men and women first learned the old, old fashion of loving and being loved. And if the fashion lasts we need not care for the rest. Here are my congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn.

If the Lord did help that Sanger man
To find a one to wed,
And if things now look somewhat mixed,
As I have heard it said,
Why, one thing now is clear to me—
I say it without doubt—
The Lord right now should rustle round
And help the couple out.

And one thing more occurs to me:
If bach'lors all should pray
To Heaven to send to them their wives,
As surely bach'lors may;
And if each one who thus should pray
A book agent should get,
I don't say much; I only say
There'd be some fun, you bet.

Why cannot brethren dwell together in unity? Why should little Clovis hands be used to scratch little Clovis eyes? Why should the postmaster over there accuse Sunderland, Wrenn and McClung of being "such men?" This is a serious charge to lay at the door of men whom we all believe to be good citizens. If they are "such men" we naturally want to know it, but for my part I never will suppose that they are "such men" until I have seen the proof.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN.

ARE MAKING FORTUNES

MINERS FARING WELL AT CLONDYKE, ALASKA.

Clarence Berry's Luck Continues. Rich Strikes Made by Two Railroad Men.

Deputy County Clerk Ed Bush received a letter recently from his sister, Mrs. Clarence Berry, who is at present with her husband at Clondyke, Alaska. Mr. Berry, his wife writes, is meeting with gratifying success at mining and will probably clean up between $50,000 and $75,000 this season. It will be remembered that he made a very rich strike last season. He did intend to come home on a visit this year, but now says he will not be able to do so till next, as he wishes to make a thorough clean-up before leaving and the river will be frozen before he can finish.

Stories of other rich strikes in and around Clondyke have drifted this way. Among the lucky ones are two ex-employes of the Southern Pacific. They were brakemen and both are well known in Fresno, though their homes are in Los Angeles. Their names are Charles Summers and Frank Clemens. Neither had ever had any experience in mining, but both had the proverbial good luck of tenderfeet. They located claims, struck it rich, sold out and are now on their way home. Clemens is reported to have received $35,000 for his claim, while Summers, who held out two weeks longer, got $50,000. The money with which the bargain was clinched consisted of a $23 gold nugget which was picked up from the dump, and it was the largest found in the Clondyke district up to that time.

Many others are reported to have struck it at Clondyke, which appears to be the objective point of every miner in Alaska just now. From Circle City comes the report that every miner in that section has gone crazy over Clondyke, and that at $12 a day enough miners cannot be found to work the placers. One miner, Alexander McDonald by name, secured $800 in a single pan, and offered to wager $1000 that he could in twenty minutes pick dirt that would net twice that amount to a single pan. No one accepted his wager.

VALLEY ROAD NEWS.

Visit of Prominent Officials Yesterday—The Reedley Branch.

Vice-President Watt, Director Payson, Chief Engineer Storey and Secretary Mackie of the Valley railroad made a short stop in Fresno yesterday morning on their way north from Hanford. They had been on a tour of inspection and expressed themselves as satisfied with the condition of the road and the volume of business.

Work on the Hanford branch, which was suspended some weeks ago, will be resumed as soon as the Reedley branch has been extended some distance beyond Visalia. The rumor that the company is considerably disappointed with the country traversed beyond Hanford is not founded on fact. The management knew thoroughly the character of the whole country along the Hanford route, and having traversed the best part of it thought it would be wise to first finish the Reedley branch to Visalia so as to be able to bid for the transportation of the grain so extensively raised in that region. The bridge over the river at Reedley is being pushed rapidly to completion and will be ready for the tracklayers in about a week.

IRRIGATION RATES

Supervisors May Attempt to Regulate Them.

HAVE THE RIGHT TO DO SO

The Board Receives the Auditor's Semi-Annual Report—The Torrens Law.

The supervisors yesterday received the report of the county treasurer and county auditor for the second half of the fiscal year ending June 30th. It shows a balance on hand on the date mentioned of $101,758.02. The balance on January 1st last was $220,968.80. Nearly all the funds are in good condition, showing balances. The general fund had a balance on June 30th of $15,019.30; salary fund, $8687.76; road fund No. 1, $4795.15; road fund No. 2, $688.34; road fund No. 3, $455.35; road fund No. 4, $1216.49; road fund No. 5, $3331.18. The county orphanage and White's bridge funds are made to balance by transferring from them to the general fund the sums of $5853.38 and $2404.82 respectively. The general road fund shows a balance of only $3, but the amount in that fund was recently divided among the district road funds. The only fund that shows an overdraft is the indigent fund, in which there is a deficit of $307.49. The demands upon this fund have been very heavy. The expenditures during the second half of the fiscal year amounted to $324,673.58.

Dr. J. L. Maupin, county health officer, was given leave of absence for thirty days.

After passing on a number of claims against the county, the board adjourned until the 24th inst. On Monday morning the supervisors will meet as a county board of equalization and continue in session as such until the 23d inst. Those who are dissatisfied with their assessments should appear before the board and state their case during the next twelve days, for any person asking for a rebate after the 24th will get the glassy eye and the marble heart.

A matter that is likely to come up before the supervisors soon is the fixing of the water rates that may be charged by the canal companies. A few days ago the board asked the district attorney's office for an opinion on the question whether the board could enact an ordinance governing water rates of canals throughout the county, and yesterday Deputy George W. Jones submitted an opinion.

Mr. Jones holds that the board has the right to enact such an ordinance and refers it to the act approved on March 12, 1885, section 2 of which reads as follows:

"The several boards of supervisors of this state, in petition and notice as provided in section 3 of this act, are hereby authorized and required to fix and regulate the maximum rates at which any person, company, association or corporation, having or to have appropriated water for sale, rental, or distribution in each of such counties, may and shall sell, rent, or distribute the same."

The remaining sections of the act prescribe the method of procedure. The petition to the board must be signed by not less than twenty-five taxpayers, and upon its receipt the clerk of the board must immediately cause the petition, together with a notice of the time and place of hearing thereof, to be published in one or more newspapers published in such county. The board may also cause citations to issue to any person or persons within the county, to attend and give evidence at the hearing of such petition, and may compel such attendance by attachment.

It is not yet known how the supervisors stand on this question, but if they make an attempt to fix the irrigation rates it is believed they will meet with vigorous opposition from the companies.

Another question referred to the district's attorney's office for an opinion was the following: "Is the Torrens Land Act in effect in this county, and under said act is it the duty of the board to provide the necessary record books and blanks to the recorder at the expense of the county?"

Deputy Jones answered this by stating that by section 116 of said act the act went into effect on the 1st of July last in every county in the state. As to the proposition of the liability of the board to furnish the necessary record books and blanks required by the act, section 109 of the act reads as follows: "All books, blanks, papers, and all things necessary for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, shall be furnished by the Board of Supervisors, at the expense of the county." These books, blanks, etc., are to be prepared by the attorney general, state controller and secretary of state and no others shall be used by the officials.

Mr. Jones expressed the opinion to a REPUBLICAN reporter yesterday that it would not be necessary at present for the board to incur the expense of procuring the above mentioned books, etc., as in all probability it will be some time before the act will be called into requisition in this county. It is not likely, however, that the board will take any chances in this direction, for any day some one may come who wishes to take advantage of the law. In that event it would not do to turn the applicant away because the board had failed to furnish the necessary books and blanks. It is probable that the supervisors will secure these as soon as they have been printed.

Your attention is called to the fact that I am not a member of any combination to raise the prices of repair work on bicycles, and that I have never been a member of such a combination. My prices have been reasonable and just, and they are so today. I am independent of all other dealers, and will continue to do business on that scale.

THEY DID RIGHT.

Supervisors Commended for Extending Aid to E. Wright.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—In the Expositor of Friday there appeared an article censuring the Board of Supervisors for granting aid to Mr. Wright, who had his house and all the furniture and wearing apparel therein burned on the morning of the 6th inst. The statement as made by the Expositor is false, as the amount given was not for the purpose of building the house, but to assist him in living until he could straighten up a little.

A more worthy man and family could not be found in Fresno, as the kind and liberal assistance furnished them by their neighbors and citizens of Fresno will testify. As one of the committee I will say that we do not like to see the supervisors censured when they were doing a worthy act. K.

GREAT ALTERATION SALE.

Tremendous Reductions Advertised by Kutner-Goldstein Co.

The great mercantile house of Kutner-Goldstein Co. which has always been and is now the leading retail merchandising concern in the interior of California, is crowded for space. Their business has been growing enormously in recent years and the firm is compelled to extend its premises. In order to prepare themselves for extensive alterations they find it necessary to dispose of a good portion of their present stock. The way they go about disposing of it may be seen by a reference to the prices quoted in their large advertisement on the first page of today's REPUBLICAN. Experts in values weep when they see such sacrifices as Kutner-Goldstein are making for this sale, but the firm has decided that the goods must go and so the public gets the benefit. *

SCHOOL NOTES.

The County Board of Education Adjourns—Teachers Selected.

The County Board of Education adjourned yesterday after having finished the work of revising the course of study for the schools. A number of changes were made.

Malaga district has voted a special tax of $450 in order to maintain two teachers during the ensuing term. In Kroeger district an election has been called to vote a special tax of $500 for the same purpose, and in the Paige district the question of a special tax of $400 will be submitted to the voters.

Mrs. H. W. Neeley has been selected to teach in Bethel district, Miss Julia Dahlgren in Harrison, and Mrs. H. J. Harriman at Pomona.

The Garcias in Court.

Thomas and Frank Garcia, charged with an assault with intent to commit murder, were before Justice Austin yesterday morning. They were informed of their rights and their bail was fixed at $2000. Their examination was set for July 16th at 10 a.m. The defendants were examined once at Firebaugh and held to answer. A defect in the proceedings was subsequently discovered and the case was sent to Justice Austin's court for a hearing. The Garcias stabbed a man named Francisco Feliz during a fight at Firebaugh.

BRYAN'S NAME IS DENNIS

SO THINKS AN OLD FASHIONED DEMOCRAT.

That Bath the Nebraskan Took Spoiled His Presidential Chances.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—I am a life-long Democrat, having given my first vote to Franklin Pierce in 1852, and from that date down to the last presidential election I have never failed to cast my ballot for the nominees of my party at every election, municipal, county, state and national. I even voted for Horace Greeley in 1872, although I never did relish the taste of crow or enjoy its smell! It has even been my practice and a part of my political teachings and faith never to scratch a Democratic ticket! I was an earnest and ardent supporter of Mr. Bryan at the late presidential election, and mourned over his defeat with almost a bursting heart and an agonized soul. On last Saturday I listened to his burning eloquence with transports of delight, and fancied, the while, that I was in the presence of America's first citizen and the next president of the United States. It was not until yesterday that I had any reason to believe that it was in human power to shatter my idol, or to prevent Mr. Bryan from becoming the chosen successor to Mr. McKinley. But I now feel that my cherished hopes have been forever blasted, and that William J. Bryan is as far removed from the presidential office as Chris Evans is from the papal chair!

The "monarch of the dailies" coupled with Mr. Bryan's own rashness and lack of discretion, has for all time placed the Nebraskan beyond the pale of a presidential possibility. That picture on the sixth page of the Examiner of yesterday, showing the Great Bimetallist taking a bath, effectually "cooks his political goose!" All the world knows that the rank and file of the "party of Jefferson and Jackson" is, and always has been, the inveterate and uncompromising foe of water in that shape and for that use. There has ever been an enduring conflict between the "Great Unwashed" and water in any form, except when moderately used to slake thirst, but when one of its leaders so far forgets Democratic teachings and traditions, as to plunge headlong into old Sutro's tanks, he ought to know that such rashness, such thoughtlessness, cannot fail to extinguish utterly every hope of political advancement he may have cherished, however promising it may have been.

Foote, Gould, Alford and Maguire are to be held responsible for this disastrous turn in the political tide of Mr. Bryan. On their heads must rest the odium of his undoing, for had they guarded more vigilantly their unthinking ward and interdicted that fatal plunge, he would yet be a presidential possibility, and might have been the first President of the coming century. As it is, as a Democratic candidate in 1900 he is functus, and if he be wise he will right now "call off the hounds and quit the chase," for no man can get the support of the great army of Democracy who takes so kindly to water as has Mr. Bryan! The course of the Examiner is reprehensible to the last degree. It should have suppressed that picture, and should never have given publicity to the taking of that bath. When Mr. Bryan put on that bathing suit and paddled around in old Sutro's sea brine, his name was Dennis!

ANDREW JACKSON JEFFERSON.

Emory Donahoo and William Keisker had four lively rounds at the athletic club last evening. A large crowd was in attendance and a great deal of interest was taken. Matches for September 9th will probably be made between Jack Broad and Arthur Hayes and Elden Albin and Ed Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Dunning of Fort Wayne, Indiana, are the guests of F. E. Black. Mr. Dunning is interested in the oil fields on the West Side and expects to stay in California.

WILL BE A CLOSE GAME

Corkers and "Republicans" to Cross Bats.

A GREAT CONTEST TODAY

The Sacramento Team Has an Unbroken Record of Victories. The Lineup.

The baseball game between the Capital City Corkers and the FRESNO REPUBLICANS is attracting more attention than any other game heretofore announced. The two teams have played the preliminary games of the Examiner tournament without being defeated, and now that the semi-finals are opened, they will exert themselves to the utmost to keep their records clear of defeat.

The Sacramento boys, realizing the prowess of their opponents, have done all in their power to improve their chances of victory. Among other things they have signed a new pitcher who is entered by the name of F. Newbert. As he is unknown to the "cranks" it is believed that some "phenom" has been entered under an alias. The following article from yesterday's Record-Union of Sacramento seems to justify this belief:

"The Sacramento Corkers start for Fresno this evening, and will play the REPUBLICAN team of that place tomorrow. The home boys will go up against twirler Balez, and will have a chance to show what they can do when a first-class pitcher shunts the ball over the plate.

"The Corkers, however, do not intend to depend entirely on field work and hard hitting to win out. Manuel de Costa will again be in the box for them, and the Fresnoites will have to do some guessing before they keep the Corkers' outfield busy. De Costa signed with the Gilt Edge team about six weeks ago, but was never put in the box by them. About a week ago, it is understood, he was released, and arrangements are said to have been made by which he will henceforth alternate with Overmeyer in shooting the ball over the home plate for the youngsters.

"Here is a tip for the Corkers: Balez the 'phenomenal,' throws nothing but straight balls this year. One is very fast, and the other is as slow as molasses in January. If they wait until the slow ball reaches them they will win."

Devine, the third baseman, has the best record of any player in the tournament for clean fielding and throwing to bases. The second baseman is next in line. The records are from the official tab kept on each player by the tournament committee.

The home team has been strengthened by the addition of Thompson in right field. He is reputed to be a good fielder and a terrific batter and should prove to be a valuable acquisition.

Manager Ward has decided to have the game called at 3 o'clock instead of 2. This change was made at the request of a number of patrons of the game who prefer to wait until the hottest part of the day is over before they exert themselves in "rooting" for their favorites.

The Examiner will send down an official umpire to call balls and strikes.

An excursion will be run from Hanford on the Valley road and the train will remain here until an hour after the game, so that those desiring to witness the game may have plenty of time to return.

The two teams will line up as follows:

REPUBLICANS		Corkers.
Balz	Pitcher	F. Newbert
Chance	Catcher	Newbert
Waggoner	1st base	Ridley
Decker	2d base	Karcher
McCarthy Joe	Shortstop	Smith
Brittan	3d base	Devine
Hayes	Leftfield	Rice
Gilbert	Centerfield	Wiseman
Thompson	Rightfield	Hannon

A telegram from Secretary Pringle of the Examiner tournament committee to Manager Ward of the REPUBLICANS stated that in all probability the home team would be called upon to play in San Francisco next Sunday. The opposing team will be the Reliance, Santa Cruz or the winner of the Will & Fincks-California Markets game which will be played today in Central Park.

Joe McCarthy returned last evening from San Francisco and says that the baseball fever has struck the metropolis in dead earnest. The San Francisco cranks have a good deal of respect for the FRESNO REPUBLICANS. McCarthy overheard two cranks quarreling over the respective merits of the California Markets and the REPUBLICANS, and if bystanders had not interfered they would have come to blows.

WORK AT THE CANNERY

IT WILL BEGIN ON PEACHES THIS WEEK.

Sixteen Carloads of Apricots and Blackberries Packed—That Seized Fig Brandy.

The Tenney cannery which was shut down a week ago will resume operations this week. It had been working on apricots and blackberries and packed about sixteen carloads of fruit. It stopped only when the better grades began to give out.

The quality of the apricots put up was very fair, while the blackberries were good. For apricots the cannery paid from 1 to 1¼ cents a pound, which is considered a fair price.

About the middle of this week the cannery will begin packing peaches. It is not yet known how much will be put up, but it is expected that there will be a good sized pack.

A new warehouse has been built by the company next to the cannery. Its dimensions are 110x60. It is a substantial building and has a corrugated iron roof. The increase in the company's business necessitated this improvement.

It will be remembered that some time ago six barrels of fig brandy were seized by revenue officers at the company's distillery. It was claimed by the officers that the law does not authorize brandy to be manufactured of figs. The company contended, however, that as the law provided that brandy might be made out of berries, and as the fig was a berry, it had not violated the law, and the seizure should not have been made. While it is not stated that the government will agree to the classification of figs as berries, the cannery people profess to be confident that the case will end in their favor.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Election of a Superintendent Deferred.

SECRETARY HOGUE'S REPORT

George Cosgrave Resigns a Principalship and Will Practice Law.

The district Board of Education was to have elected a superintendent of the city schools at an adjourned session last evening, but the matter was deferred till the next meeting, which will be held on August 2d. One teacher was selected for the high school, but the other vacancy was not filled.

The first business before the board was the resignation of George Cosgrave from the position of principal of the Central school. It was accepted. Mr. Cosgrave has decided to enter upon the practice of law, having been admitted to the bar. He has taught in the city for several years past, and proved an efficient educator. The board regrets to lose his services. An application was received from Fred T. Moore, who has been teaching for a number of years in Summit Lake district, for the vacant principalship. The board already had a number of applications on file.

The choosing of a successor to Mr. Cosgrave was laid over till the next meeting in August. Mr. Hogue moved to elect Mr. Moore and Judge Church seconded the motion, but it failed to carry. The position is an important one and the members of the board desire to consider every application for it thoroughly before taking action.

Mr. Stephens moved that the salaries of teachers in grammar and primary grades be fixed the same as last year, $100 a month for principals and $75 for teachers. Trustee Church promptly expressed the opinion that the salaries were too high. Compared with those paid in some of the eastern states, cited by the trustee, the pay is a third to a half higher here than there. The trustee called attention to the fact that the present salaries are the same as those of several years ago when times was good. Judge Church thought teachers should bear the effects of the hard times as well as others.

Mr. Monroe said that the country teachers generally were receiving as much as those in this city, and he did not think a comparison with the East was a fair one, because of the difference in the cost of living. He pays a third more, he said, for a drug clerk here than the clerks receive in the eastern states.

Then followed a discussion between Judge Church and Mr. Hogue on "hard times." The latter said he couldn't notice much reduction in the cost of living from a number of years ago, his grocery bill being about the same then as it is now.

"Yes," replied Judge Church, "but a roll of butter which cost 75 cents then you can buy for 30 cents now." The Judge forgot to take advantage of the point, which might have been effective, that Mr. Hogue since "several years ago" has become a member of the Hundred Thousand Club, and that the population has increased.

"These are hard times," asserted Judge Church, who had not yet got over the effects of the Bryan meeting.

Mr. Hogue stated that in his opinion $75 was not too big a salary when it was received only nine months out of the year, and Chairman Monroe believed that to get good teachers good salaries must be paid.

The motion fixing the salaries the same as they were last year was then put and carried. Trustees Church and Stephens did not vote.

Mr. Noble moved that Miss Katie Balthis, teacher of the Third grade in the K street building, be transferred to the Fourth grade at the Park avenue school. The motion was carried. Miss Adelia Witt was transferred from the Fourth grade to the Second in the K street building. These removals were by request. On motion of Mr. Stephens Miss Stewart and Miss Mamie Darling, two of the new teachers, were assigned to the Third and Fourth grades, respectively, at the K street school. Mrs. Barker was assigned to the grammar grade to take the place made vacant by the retirement of Miss C. C. Pendergast. Miss Annie J. Harvey was given the B Fifth grade at the Central school, which position was made vacant by the resignation of Miss Merritt Eley.

The assigning of principals was postponed until a successor to Mr. Cosgrave is selected.

Miss Carrie J. Weaver was unanimously elected substitute teacher. She has taught for a number of years at Reedley, and is able to fill any place in the schools.

The board then went into executive session to discuss the selection of a city superintendent, or to speak more correctly, a supervising principal. There were a large number of applications on file. The secret session lasted for about half an hour and when the board reconvened in regular session the selection of a superintendent was postponed till the next meeting on motion of Judge Church.

Professor J. B. Dymot was re-employed as musical instructor in the schools at a salary of $75 a month.

Ernst H. Bierman was employed as teacher of German and as assistant in mathematics in the high school at a salary of $100 a month. He was named by Trustee Stephens. Mr. Bierman is from Stanford University, having been an assistant instructor in German there. The selection of a teacher in English was deferred.

Secretary Hogue had a general report ready, but it was decided to postpone its reading till the next meeting. The report is quite lengthy and the secretary has done a considerable amount of work in gathering the data and preparing it. It is a valuable document, as it is an accurate description of the condition of the district's interests.

In regard to the high school building Secretary Hogue states that it will likely provide ample room for the high school and the seventh and eighth grades of the grammar school for some time to come. The apparatus and furnishing for the courses of study now followed are about complete. He recommends, upon the advice of Principal McLane, that a photographic outfit and stereopticon be furnished. The cost of these apparatus will not exceed $150, and they will be of considerable benefit to teachers and pupils.

Mr. Hogue says the Park avenue building is in good order, but urges that it be connected with the city's sewer system.

The Central building needs a thorough overhauling, the secretary states. The plaster on the walls and ceiling is badly cracked. The building should be painted inside and out. The sheds and outbuildings are too small and not in as good condition as they should be. "The grounds are a disgrace to the city," Mr. Hogue concludes, "and the block should be leveled and planted to shade trees and shrubbery."

Concerning the C-street school the secretary reports that the building and the grounds are in fair condition. There is need of some repairs and more shed room.

The K-street building was found to be in good condition.

Coming to the finances of the district, the secretary states that the total expenses last term, aside from the bond redemption and building funds, amounted to $52,646 29. Of this about $10,500 was paid for labor, furniture, apparatus and street grading, an expense which will not be incurred the coming term. Mr. Hogue estimates that the total expenditure in maintaining the schools next year will be $42,000.28. At the beginning of the present fiscal year there was on hand $1381.41. Because of the increase in the school census the district will receive $1100 more from the county and the state than it did last year.

Of course if any new subjects are introduced into the curriculum of the high school, the expenses will be increased.

The total bonded indebtedness of the district, continues the report, is $75,000, in which the rate of interest is 6 per cent, payable semi-annually. To meet the interest, which will fall due during the coming year, $4500, or the same amount as that paid last year must be raised. Whether or not a larger sum should be raised for the purpose of providing a sinking fund for the redemption of bonds when they begin to fall due, is a matter which will soon be submitted to the district attorney for his opinion, as the law is somewhat indefinite.

Mr. Hogue recommends an increase in the tuition charges from outside pupils who attend the city schools. He says that the average cost per pupil in the high school last year, based upon the actual attendance, was $6.32 a month, and $2.95 in the lower grades. Mr. Hogue thinks the tuition ought to be fixed near these figures—more rather than less, because in the estimate of the expenses he had not considered the interest on the bonded indebtedness. The present rates of tuition are $3 a month for the high school and $2 for the lower grades.

Mr. Hogue took advantage of the opportunity to express his personal opinions and ideas. "As there is no one to stop me at this time I shall give them," was the way the secretary stated it in his report. Continuing, Mr. Hogue said: "My opinion is that too much time and attention are given to the study of Latin, and too little to grammar. Under the requirements of the state university, however, this may be necessary to keep our high school in touch with it.

"I am also strongly in favor of adding drawing and manual training to our course. I do not know what systems or how much of each would be best, but it seems to me that a blending of drawing, Sloyd and manual training could be worked out which would be of benefit to those students who expect to fight the battles of life with their heads, and of greater benefit to those who will have to use the hands together with the mind.

"I consider the matter of commercial training also of importance, but in my humble judgment the successful business man is born rather than educated. The fact remaining that vastly more of our sons and daughters must battle with life's duties with the hands, and can never hope to be bookkeepers, clerks and the like, should they not be taught that manual labor is as honorable as any other?

"I also believe that we should have a teacher of elocution and physical culture. I think it is more important that a child should be taught how to stand, breathe and articulate properly than to be able to read music or do anything else properly."

The secretary concludes his report by expressing the opinion that the demands of the residents of Russiatown for a ward school there were reasonable.

HILL HELD TO ANSVER

LLOYD DUKE'S MURDERER NOT ALLOWED BAIL.

The Preliminary Examination Held at Coalinga Friday—Officers Return.

Leon Hill was held to answer without bail on a charge of murder by Justice W. J. Kilby at Coalinga on Friday. Deputy Sheriff Timmins returned last night from the West Side with the prisoner. There also returned on the same train E. A. Williams and G. C. Freman, of the district attorney's office, who conducted the prosecution at the preliminary examination; F. H. Short, who appeared for the defendant, and J. W. Gearhart, who took a stenographic report of the case.

The testimony adduced at the examination showed that the defendant had purposely provoked Lloyd Duke in order to gain a pretext to kill him. The evidence was to the same effect as the accounts of the atrocious murder which have heretofore appeared in the REPUBLICAN. After he had been exasperated by Hill, Duke jumped from his wagon ostensibly to fight, which opportunity the murderer was looking for. Hill jumped from his conveyance at the same time the victim alighted from his, and immediately raised the rifle and fired the fatal shot. It developed in the testimony that Hill had been looking for trouble with Duke for some time.

Some months ago Deputy District Attorney Freman prosecuted Postmaster Johnson at Alcalde for having kicked Hill out of his place because the latter had become obstreperous. While the evidence against the postmaster appeared to be very strong, the jury acquitted Johnson. Afterwards the jurors came to the deputy district attorney and explained that they knew Hill and they would convict no man for kicking him.

The murderer wanted to become a "bad man" and has been the terror of the West Side. His ambition has been gratified, but he has a charge of cowardly murder to answer for.

Colonel Crocker Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Charles F. Crocker, vice-president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, has been prostrated by an apoplectic stroke at his home at San Mateo. The stroke was so serious that Dr. George Shiemore of this city was summoned to the bedside of Mr. Crocker and was taken there by special train. Subsequently Dr. Matthew Gardner, chief surgeon of the Southern Pacific Company, was summoned to come at once. A special train conveyed him to Mr. Crocker's country home. Dr. Gardner denied that Colonel Crocker suffered a stroke of apoplexy. He said that it was only a fainting spell. It is learned, however, that Colonel Crocker is a very sick man.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA

WILL COMBINE ON A POLICY IN ORIENTAL AFFAIRS.

German Newspapers Full of Forebodings in Regard to the United States Tariff.

BERLIN, July 10.—The main business of serious import to be transacted during Emperor William's visit to the Czar, the correspondent of the Associated Press learns, will be the formation of a distinct understanding between Russia and Germany in regard to a frankly anti-British policy in the Orient, especially in connection with Japan and China, and in the event of possible complications arising from the critical situation in India, Emperor William will pledge himself to systematically support Russian interests in that part of the world, a policy which in the main is approved by Prince Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, and which, it is hoped, will further isolate Great Britain. Russia on her part is to promise the weight of her influence in favor of Germany in the event of annexation plans in Samoa and elsewhere maturing.

Physically the Emperor is unusually well. When he started from Lubreck on his north land trip it was generally remarked how healthy and sunburned he looked.

The Empress, with her seven children, has stormed and captured the hearts of the simple Bavarians. She and her children are the objects of ceaseless, spontaneous ovations. The two elder princesses are being introduced into the mystery of chamois hunting and grouse hunting by veteran mountaineers.

Terrible thunder storms, hail stones and cloud bursts have devastated large streets of Wurtemburg, Baden and Alsace. In the district of Gehring, Wurtemburg, alone the damage is computed at 10,000,000 marks, with no insurance.

The newspapers are full of dismal forebodings in regard to the new United States tariff. The liberal newspapers, however, for instance, the National Zeitung, the Tageblatt, Borrsen Courier and others, warn the government against entering forthwith into a tariff war with the United States, though they have no doubt the Dingley bill will become a law substantially as passed by the senate, and that German industry, notably woolens, will be gravely injured.

INDIANS IN COUNCIL.

Object to the Enforcement of the Anti-Bigamy Law.

GUTHRIE, O. T., July 10.—Over 1000 Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians are holding a grand council and dance at Darlington, demanding that the recent anti-bigamy law be not enforced against them. Their sessions are in secret. They refuse to obey the orders of the agent and there is fear of serious trouble. They say they cannot choose which wife they like best; they like them all, and do not want to part with any—or with the annuities that each wife and child draw.

Another report is to the effect that among the Indians of the territory a movement is on foot for a migration south, out of the United States and into the republic of Mexico, and that the pow-wow is a preliminary step toward such an exodus.

Drowned in a Ditch.

VISALIA, July 10.—The sixteen-month-old daughter of W. B. Rice, who resides twenty-two miles east of Visalia, was drowned in a ditch yesterday afternoon.

The "Summer Butterfly" in London.

I wonder if you know what a "summer butterfly" is. If you were skilled in the ways of the cabby, you would know that it is the small tradesman who turns cabman during the season, returning to his legitimate occupation when autumn sets in. "Butterflies" are being gradually weeded out by the police, and a man is allowed to take out a cab driver's license only when he can prove that he is what he represents himself to be. A cabman's earnings greatly depend, I may say, on luck. Accordingly the weekly wage may range from as low as 10 shillings to as high as £2 at certain seasons. The hours, as you know, are exceedingly long. Supposing a man turns out at 10 a. m. He drives the same horse from six to seven hours, and then, changing horses, goes on till 3 o'clock in the morning.

There is not so much difference between hansom cab drivers and the four wheel men as the public seem to imagine. Not infrequently drivers change and change about. Thus a four wheeler who feels that the moving of heavy boxes is past his strength will take a hansom, or, again, the hansom cabby who finds that his exposed position brings on rheumatism and kindred ills will change in favor of the more jog trot vehicle. There is scarcely a well known cab driver in London but has his own special appellation, generally given to him in view of some physical or mental peculiarity. Some idea of the literary attainments and wide knowledge of cabby can be given by the fact that among the nicknames may be found "Trilby," "Lord Randolph Churchill," "Flop the Beadle," "Ulster Jack," "Sweet Apple Joe," "Busy Bee," "Garibaldi," "Nicodemus" and "Fourin-hand." Not infrequently the men are known to one another only by their pseudonyms.—London Sketch.

One Use For It.

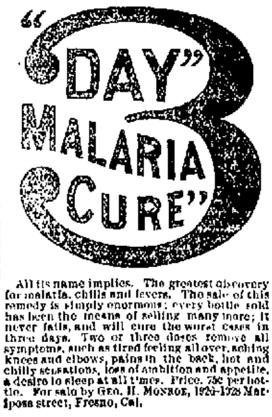
"I see there has been a machine patented which records every time a man moves," said Juniper.

"Well, it would put the machine to a pretty good test if it was tried on some of my tenants," said Flatts, the landlord.—Yonkers Statesman.

Ambiguity.

Wilks—Jones said his books have been read for 20 years.

Bilks—Yes. I have noticed he always had them bound in that color.—Princeton Tiger.



All its name implies. The greatest discovery for malaria, chills and fevers. The sale of this remedy is simply enormous; every bottle sold has been the means of selling many more; it never fails, and will cure the worst cases in three days. Two or three doses remove all symptoms, such as tired feeling all over, aching knees and elbows, pains in the back, hot and chilly sensations, loss of ambition and appetite, a desire to sleep at all times. Price, 75c per bottle. For sale by GEO. H. MONROE, 1926-1928 Mariposa street, Fresno, Cal.

A KOREAN PRINCE HERE.

Will Attend an American College For a Few Years.

After escaping the conspiracies against his life hatched by the enemies of his royal house Crown Prince Eui-Wha of Korea has come to the United States to finish his education. He arrived in San Francisco recently, accompanied by two young Korean noblemen, Yong Kin and Sin Sung Koa. Yong Kin is well equipped to bring the prince to this country and establish him at some seat of learning along the Atlantic seaboard, for he was for three years the charge d'affaires of the Korean legation at Washington.

Eui-Wha needs to rub up against the world as much as possible, for the ruling of Korea and the guarding of its ruling is no easy task. His education thus far has been of the best. For a year he has been an attendant at the celebrated Japanese school of Fuko-Zama, an institution much affected by Korean young men, and now he comes to acquaint himself with western ways and western speech.—Exchange.

Microbes In the Food.

Microbe free oysters, even if we could get them, are not to be desired, according to a report by Professor W. A. Herdman of University college, Liverpool. Our milk, our bread and cheese, our ham sandwiches and other kinds of food are teeming with germs, most of them harmless so far as we know, but some of them may be just as bad as any that can be in shellfish. If we were to insist on breathing filtered air and eating nothing but sterile food, washed down with antiseptic drinks, we should probably die of starvation or something worse. While deprecating extreme measures by sanitary reformers, however, Professor Herdman recommends inspection of shellfish grounds, to insure their practical freedom from sewage. He would also have oysters kept alive in running water for a short time, as experiments show that the living animal in clean water soon gets rid of any disease germs with which it may be infected.

Senator Hanna Does Not Care For Cuba.

There is no news in the statement that Senator Hanna is opposed to what he calls "this agitation" about Cuba, for his efforts to prevent a vote in the senate on the belligerency resolution are still remembered. The other day, however, he was expressing his opinion in very emphatic terms to a fellow senator. "There isn't the least bit of interest in the question in Ohio," asserted Mr. Hanna, "and I do not think the country is half as much concerned as some of the agitators here would have us believe."

"Well, Hanna," said his colleague, "I will bet you $500 that your state convention declares for Cuba."

"Very likely," slowly assented Mr. Hanna, "because some fool will get up with a resolution which nobody will care to oppose."

"And the country is full of just such fools," was the other senator's parting shot.—Washington Post.

DAN MITERS.

By OPIE READ.

[Copyright, 1897, by the Author.]

CHAPTER I.

Dan Miters was especially drunk. By this I mean that any other man in the village of Cane Hill might have been drunk—and indeed other men of that respectable community had been known to indulge too heartily in drink—but that Dan Miters, being the acknowledged drunkard of the place, was especially and particularly intoxicated. He was a man of acknowledged sense. He had, gossip said, as a prelude to some disparaging statement concerning his weakness, carried off the honors at a well known school. One thing was certain—he expressed himself in better language than even the county judge could hope to employ. And this, at Cane Hill, was regarded as a convincing assertion of a higher education.

Dan had first come to the village as the agent of a nursery—not that sort of a nursery which would disprove the declaration that marriage, among the poor at least, is a failure to perpetuate human misery, but as the agent of a company which had fruit trees for sale. He did not thoroughly succeed in running the gantlet of village curiosity, for villagers are critical of appearances, and a lazy lounger who sits all day at the store while his wife is taking in washing—the utterly worthless fellow who would rather wallow in the mire with a black falsehood than to recline on a velvet couch with a bright truth; who wears a filthy shirt and one "bedtick" suspender; who chews charity tobacco and spits at a knothole, which he thinks by the right of his own yellow slime he has pre-empted—that fellow will criticise the clothes and facial expression of a stranger.

Dan was criticised not only by the worthless loafer, but by the merchant and even by the faded woman who had slipped in to exchange a few eggs for a small piece of calico. They declared that Dan's hair was too red and that there were too many freckles on his face, and it was agreed that he did not dress as a gentleman should. The worthless loafer squirted at his pre-empted knothole and remarked:

"Now you're gittin right down to the squar' facts."

That was a long time ago. Dan was absorbed into the community's social system and became celebrated as the village drunkard. Previous to his achievement of this distinction, the fame had belonged to one Peter B. Rush, and it appeared that he could never be robbed of the reputation which he had laboriously acquired, but after a few years of close contest Peter B. Rush's warmest admirers were forced to acknowledge that the palm belonged to Dan Miters. What a handy man was Miters when a comparison was needed! What an encouragement to innovation! A man in speaking of some one who was stupidly influenced by liquor was no longer under the necessity of saying that he was as drunk as the disreputable canine associate of the fiddler, but simply fulfilled all demands by affirming that he was as drunk as Dan Miters.

Seriously—and unfortunately we are all compelled to be serious at times—the man of 25 whose education had not been neglected was at 45 a hopeless vagabond, with every hope trampled into the mud away down the road behind him. He did odd jobs, cleaned out cellars and cut firewood for scolding women.

One day, when he appeared to be soberer than usual, the mayor of the village thus addressed him:

"Dan, I would like to know something about your life."

"And I, sir," Dan replied, "would like to know something about my death."

"You are a funny fellow, Dan."

"No doubt of it, sir. A corpse has been known to grin."

"Come, don't talk that way. You have been here now about 20 years, and none of us knows where you were born."

"And do you really want to know where I was born?"

"Yes, I'd like to know."

"Well, sir, I was born in the night."

"There you go again. Say, do you know that if you would brace up there is yet time for you to accomplish something?"

"Yes, but you have tried and what have you accomplished?"

"Why, I own a good house and lot. I am married and have a family of interesting children."

"Is that all?"

"But isn't that enough?"

"Hardly, for you have not taught your children not to feel, and until you do this your marriage stands as a wrong. About a year ago one of your boys lost an arm at a sawmill. Weren't you the primary cause of his suffering, and is not the primary cause the meanest of all causes?"

"I won't talk to you," the mayor declared. "There is no reason in your argument and no humanity in your conclusions. But, come," he added in a softened voice, "why don't you make an effort to keep sober?"

"Because I don't want to keep sober."

"And why not?"

"Sobriety is the mother of thought."

"And you don't want to think—is that it?"

"Yes."

"And why don't you want to think? Your thoughts might amount to something. The greatest man, you know, is the greatest thinker."

"So is the greatest sufferer."

"And when you think, you suffer, eh?"

"Yes, and so do all men. Go into the library and look about you, and what do you see?"

"Books," the mayor answered.

"And what are books?"

"Gifts from superior minds," the mayor replied.

"No," said the drunkard. "They are the records of human suffering. Every great book is an echo from a heart and a pain throb from a brain. But what's the use of all this talk? What concerns me most at present is where am I going to get a drink?"

"There you go with your dogmatism."

"There you go, measuring the grains of my want in your half bushel. You don't need a drink, and you say that I don't. I would not presume to say what other men need, but it seems to be the province of all other men to dictate to me. Come, I am growing too sober and shall begin to think pretty soon. Won't you please help me out? Let me have 25 cents. You can spare it. A man who doesn't drink has but little real need for money anyway. Let me have 25 cents, and I'll do any sort of work you want me to."

"Will you help me fix up the address I've got to deliver at that political gathering?"

"Yes, I will."

"And swear that you'll never tell that you helped me?"

"Yes, I'll do that too."

"And you will draw up a paper swearing that you didn't write the address I delivered last month to the Odd Fellows? I want you to do this, for I have heard it hinted around that you had a hand in it."

"Yes, I'll do anything." Dan was about to turn away after receiving the money, when he caught sight of a woman crossing the courthouse yard. "Who is that?" he asked.

"Mrs. Burkley, the widow we have employed to teach our school," the mayor answered.

"Where did she come from?"

"From Wilson county, I believe. Did you ever meet her?"

"I think not," he said and hastened toward a doggery on the opposite side of the street.

CHAPTER II.

On a hill a short distance from the village, a hill shaded by poplar trees, was an old schoolhouse, originally built of logs, but now weatherboarded and whitewashed. The Widow Burkley had just told the children that they might go out and play until she called them, when the door was darkened by a reddish apparition. The widow uttered a befitting little shriek, and then, realizing that there was no serious cause for alarm, said, "Come in!" She would not have extended this invitation had she not wanted to set an example of courage.

Dan Miters stepped into the room. He stood for a moment looking at the widow and then said: "Don't be afraid of me. I saw you yesterday and didn't know but you"—

"Is it possible?" the woman exclaimed.

"That is what I was going to ask," Dan replied, seating himself on a bench. "Twenty years sometimes make a great change in appearance, even though hearts sometimes remain the same."

"Have you come here to reproach me? Children," she added, turning to several youngsters that showed a disposition to loiter about the door, "run along now and play."

The children vanished, and the widow, looking out to see if they were within hearing, said, "I have suffered too much to bear reproach now."

"But don't you think that you deserve reproach?" he asked.

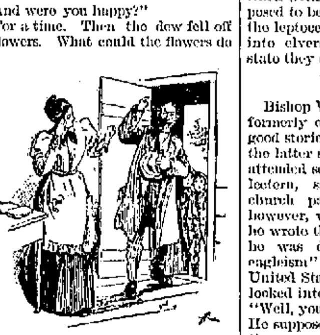
"No. I acted as I thought best. I promised to marry you, and while you were with me you did exercise so strong an influence that I thought I loved you, but when you were gone I knew that I didn't. I saw that I was charmed by your mind, but not warmed by your heart. Another man came. He was not bright. He had many foolish words. But love is sometimes best expressed in words that are foolish. You awoke my admiration. He thrilled my heart. Then I wrote and told you not to think of me again. I was buried in the roses of my own happiness. How could I think of you?"

"And you married that man?"

"Yes."

"And were you happy?"

"For a time. Then the dew fell off the flowers. What could the flowers do but wither? We went to a distant town, and there he deserted me."



"I hope you may die the most horrible of all deaths."

"Is he still living?"

"He was hanged."

"Do you love his memory?"

"No. I have learned to think, and thought is a dagger to foolish love."

"Did you know that I was here?"

"No. Some one told me that you were lost at sea."

"Did you sorrow over the news?"

"No. I did not love you."

"Did you not hear something else?"

"Not until a year ago, and then I heard that you were alive and a hopeless drunkard."

"Weren't you moved at that?"

"I was moved with pity."

"And would your pity sink deeper into your heart if I were to tell you that I am the most hopeless of all drunkards? Look at me. Look." He opened his coat. "I have given my old shirt to a negro for a drink. Does your pity sink deeper?"

"Oh, please go away, George—go away! You distress me nearly to death. My God, I have suffered enough!"

"Ah, but not for me! You have suffered because your own heart has been wrong. You have not suffered because of my degradation and despair. Mary, you still have it in your power to save me. With your help I can kill my appetite. I can do something for us both. Be my wife and atone for the awful wreck you made years ago."

"George, I have always been true to myself. I don't love you."

"Couldn't you learn—couldn't there be progress?"

"There could be progress, but that progress would be toward hatred."

He looked at her in silence. He took up his old hat, which had been dropped on the floor, and turned it round and round in his hand. He looked down at his shoes, from which his toes protruded. He got up with a stagger, gazed at her a moment, and then an expression, not a smile, but an expression like that which follows the swallowing of a bitter draft, broke through the red stubble about his mouth. "Mrs.—I don't know your name," he began, "but Mrs. Somebody, you are the most merciless creature that ever lived."

"The children say I'm kind."

"You have the spirit of a vampire."

"The children think I have the spirit of gentleness."

"I hope you may die the most horrible of all deaths! I pray to God that you may die of hydrophobia! I implore God that a mad dog may bury his teeth in your throat!"

"Go away!" she screamed. "Come, children," she cried. "Go away from here, you monster! I hate you! I wish—but I can't think of anything horrible enough. Now go!"

* * * * * * *

The village was the scene of fear inspired ferment. A report that a powerful mad dog had been seen in the neighborhood was circulated by an excited farmer. The bravest of men shudder at the sight of a mad dog. Men who would fight a grizzly bear tremble if they see a mad dog. Double fastenings were put on every door. The Widow Burkley was terror stricken. She could not be induced to leave her room. Gradually the excitement died away. School was resumed, but the widow was tremulous.

She left the schoolhouse very late one evening. Two rebellious boys had been kept in. When liberated, the boys ran away. The widow tried to keep up with them. She could not. She was hurrying along the path when a man came dashing past on a horse. "Mad dog! Mad dog!" he yelled. The widow screamed and looked back. The dog was bounding toward her. She fainted. No one had the courage to look for the widow. Late at night, almost a maniac, she knocked at the door of the house where she boarded.

Morning came. A startling discovery was made. Dan and the mad dog were found lying across the path near the place where the woman had fainted. The dog's teeth were buried in Dan's throat. Dan's fingers were stiffened about the dog's neck. Both were dead.

THE END.

Where Paleolithic Man Lived.

Kent's cavern, near Torquay, was a famous haunt of paleolithic man and extinct animals. It has been thoroughly explored. It was at one time occupied by hyenas, lions, bears and the formidable saber toothed tiger (machairadus). A certain deposit here known as the "black band" marks the place where man used to light his fires and cook his food. He seems to have been fairly accomplished for the times in which he lived, for Mr. Pengelly says of him that "he made bone tools and ornaments, harpoons for spearing fish, eyed needles, or bodkins, for sewing skins together; awls, perhaps to facilitate the passage of the slender needle through the thick hides; pins for fastening the skins they wore, and perforated badgers' teeth for necklaces or bracelets. The different layers or strata here met with testify to various changes taking place. Below everything else was found what is called breccia—that is, a layer of angular fragments of rock—with flint implements of a rude type, suggesting that the first occupants of the cave were members of some more ancient race who were less advanced even in the primitive arts of hunting and making weapons. —Hutchinson's "Prehistoric Man and Beast."

The Birthplace of Eels.

Professor G. B. Grassi of Rome recently received the Darwin medal from the Royal society in London in recognition of his biological discoveries. "The most astonishing case," says Nature, "is that of the common eel, the development of which had been a mystery since the days of Aristotle." It was known that large eels pass from rivers into the sea, and that young eels, called in England 'elvers,' ascend rivers from the sea. But no one before Grassi had been able to find out how elvers were produced. The Italian naturalist, taking advantage of the currents near the straits of Messina, which occasionally bring to the surface inhabitants of the deep waters, discovered that the eels which pass out of rivers are not fully grown, as they had been supposed to be, but that they attain complete development after entering the sea. There their eggs are hatched, the young taking at first a larval form which is identified with leptocephalus, formerly supposed to be a distinct genus. Afterward the leptocephali undergo transformation into elvers, or young eels, in which state they quit the sea for the rivers."

A Dandy Lay Out.

Bishop Walker of western New York, formerly of North Dakota, tells some good stories about his cathedral car in the latter state. One Sunday a man who attended service in it, noticing the eagle lectern, said, "Isn't the Episcopal church patriotic?" An Englishman, however, was differently impressed, for he wrote the bishop a letter saying that he was disgusted with the "spread eagleism" of religious services in the United States. One day a negro, who looked into the car, said to the bishop, "Well, you've got a dandy lay out here." He supposed that the chancel decorations were a new kind of gambling outfit.

About Microbes.

The history of science shows that, however simple a newly discovered fact or law appears at first, closer study proves it complex and intricate. This holds true in the germ theory of disease. It seems such an easy explanation. "Each disease is due to a specific microbe. Eliminate the microbe, cure the disease." But exceptions keep obtruding themselves. Often the microbe is found, but not the disease; hence bacteriologists have come to recognize that not the presence of the germ, but some virulent condition of it, causes the malady. It is said that the current of thought was first turned in this direction by the discovery by Roux and Yersin of diphtheria bacillus in a large number of normal throats and in localities where the disease had not been epidemic for years. Leaders seem to be deciding that it is a family of bacilli one has to deal with in diagnosing and treating certain disease. Some members of the family are especially pathogenic and some are not. "The last may become virulent under conditions not well understood, but the main one seems to be the passage of the bacillus through one or more individuals whose lowered resistive vitality makes them subject to the originally attenuated virulence of the bacilli." Dr. Roux of antitoxin fame believes these changes in virulence of microbes are the rule rather than the exception. Metzchnikoff found that cholera bacillus was widely spread in water, practically all over the world. Duclaux, Pasteur's successor as director of the Institut Pasteur, is also convinced that the "family of bacilli" in both typhoid and cholera is sometimes pathogenic and sometimes not, and is widely spread in nature.

Prince Boris.

Prince Boris, the future ruler of Bulgaria, is a pretty little boy, and he is fortunately too young to be at all aware of the bitter quarrels which raged over his cradle. He was still an infant in arms when he was "converted" to the Orthodox faith, to the great anger of his mother. Indeed, at the time she declared that nothing would induce her to continue taking care of her child, but maternal love conquered, and though Boris is taken in state each Sunday to an Orthodox, or Greek, church place of worship he is vigilantly guarded from those who might wish to do him harm.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Mutual Mistake.

Two ladies stood on the doorstep of a friend's house waiting for admission, and they became very impatient at the delay.

"It's very odd to be kept waiting at Mrs. Darley's," said one. "The door is usually opened so promptly."

"So it is. I'm getting very tired."

"I wonder if there is absolutely no one in the house."

"Of course there are people in. We'll ring again."

"You rang before, didn't you?"

"Why, no. I thought you rang."

"Well, I was sure you rang. How ridiculous!"

"Yes, isn't it?"

Then one of them rang, and the door was opened.—London Tit-Bits.

Beyond Recall.

Mrs. Black—It's useless for you to try to produce my husband, professor?

The Medium—Why so, madam? I excel in difficult cases.

Mrs. Black—Yes, but our pastor assures me he is not dead, but sleeping, and that being the case a dozen mediums couldn't arouse him.—Brooklyn Life.

ON A POSTER BLUE.

Said a Beardsley boy to a Bradley girl
Whom he met on a poster blue,
"I haven't an idea who I am,
And who the deuce are you?"
Said the Bradley girl to the Beardsley boy:
"I'll tell you what I think.
I came into being one night last week
When a cat tipped over the ink."
—Robert B. Peattie in Chap Book.

SWEETHEARTS ONCE.

"What!" exclaimed the laundress, pausing in counting the linen. "You do not know what has become of Camille?"

The young man in his shirt sleeves, who was searching the disordered chamber for cigarettes, stopped short and replied:

"Certainly not. How should I know? It is so long since—and then," he added, with an air of bored indifference, "what does it matter to me?"

"Oh, but I know where she lives—and happily too!"

Then, changing her tone as she tied up her bundle, she said:

"However, if you do not care about hearing"—

Maurier took long whiffs of his cigarette. He had the day before, after reading his brilliant thesis, received his diploma and was now an M. D. In another week he would return to Trivas, his native city. The name and memory of Camille, the milliner, who had been his sweetheart for a year, at the end of which he had brusquely cast her off, were not altogether indifferent to him.

"Camille! Oh, yes, that was a long time ago!" he said as he looked at the laundress, a good, ugly soul from Versailles, whom he had employed since his early student days.

"Not so long, after all," said the laundress. She was looking at him now, her hands on her hips, her keen face expressing a sort of maternal interest. She was not to be so easily imposed upon. She resumed:

"You were rather cruel to the poor little woman, weren't you?"

Maurier shrugged his shoulders almost imperceptibly as he took from his closet a bottle of cognac and two glasses, saying, as he filled them:

"I broke with her when I found the matter taking too serious a turn; that is all. One must have amusement. But to compromise a career—zut! To your good health, Mother Legrain."

The laundress as she drank the brandy said:

"It does not prevent her being happy now."

As she did not continue, after a short silence Maurier, curious, asked:

"What is she doing, anyway?"

"She is married. What do you think of that? To a fat haberdasher—a handsome shop, really—Aux Trois Princesses, Place Clichy."

"So much the better."

"And three children—loves—round and rosy as apples. You would never recognize her," said Mother Legrain insidiously.

"Do you still see her?"

"Not longer ago than a week, M. Maurier. I was at my door, Rue Morgue, when she passed with her husband and children. They had come to Versailles to visit the chateau and the park. She stopped and talked with me a full minute. And dressed! Not as she used to be—oh, no! One could see that her husband was well to do."

And satisfied, when Maurier feigned to yawn, that he was inwardly piqued to interest, she slung the bundle of clothes over her shoulder with a "Good day, M. Maurier—until Monday—good day."

Maurier prepared to go out, indulging in the following monologue:

"Ah, me, poor Camille! Well, it is better so. She has found a chance to—has got married, in fact. Curious I should so entirely have lost sight of her! She was pretty, was Camille—a trifle thin, but a good girl and full of droll humor; a piquant face, always dusted with poudre de riz, and her silky hair like an aureole about her head. How the years fly! And she is married, and I am a doctor, ripe for patients and domestic life. Really, I am not curious, but it would be quite amusing to see her again—to see her in her new surroundings. And who knows? She loved me when I sent her from me and afterward wrote me heartbroken letters. She lives in Place Clichy, eh? Stop a minute—bah, she must have forgotten me! Still, does a woman forget when she has suffered? No. It would be queer if, after all—What have I to risk? I leave Paris in a week. I'll go to see her. My heart tells me to try my luck."

With these edifying reflections Maurier went down and took the Odeon-Clichy omnibus, upon the top of which he sat humming until he reached his destination, Aux Trois Princesses. In the windows looked out upon the world an artistic arrangement of silks and linen, a forest of walking sticks and umbrellas and gorgeous cravats. Although not large, the shop indicated prosperity.

Maurier hesitated, suddenly embarrassed, not daring to enter for fear of encountering the husband or perhaps a clerk. At length, however, he entered.

Camille was behind the counter. He recognized her at once. Her fair face was dusted with rice powder, as it used to be. Her silky hair formed a nimbus about her head, as he remembered it. She raised her eyes and glanced at him expectantly, but with no sign of recognition.

"You wish something, monsieur?"

This greeting was unlooked for. He stammered:

"I would like some collars and neckties."

She came out from the counter, saying, "The clerk is at breakfast, but I will show them to you."

She did not look at him, opening the boxes as though she had never seen him, as though he were a passing customer, absolutely unknown. He felt actually timid. She played her part without affectation.

"These ties are the most worn. Here is an English article of very good quality and extremely reasonable."

Maurier stood mute and undecided.

"If she remembers me," he thought, "she must think me a prodigious fool."

And believing that he saw hovering about the corners of her lips an indefinable smile—a smile which he well knew—he said to himself, "She is paying me back, that's certain." So he, too, began to smile, a foolish, fatuous grin, which was promptly extinguished as he realized that she was not looking at him, but seemed to be absently waiting until he should make his choice of a cravat. Finally he said desperately:

"I will take this, and this, and that."

"Is there nothing else? Monsieur wished to see collars."

He nodded. Why did he not speak? He was alone with her, the clerk at the midday meal, the husband absent, and he could not say the words which were strangling him:

"Camille, it is I. Don't you remember me?"

Yes, undoubtedly she did. Again there flitted across her lips that half smile so familiar to him. Certainly she knew him.

"What size?" she asked.

He made an awkward gesture of ignorance. She unrolled her tape measure and placed it in a businesslike manner around Maurier's neck. For a second, as she stood before him, their faces were so near together that he could have kissed her.

"Fifteen," she said, opening some collar boxes for him to choose from. He picked out four boxes; then, still unwilling to go, asked to see some umbrellas, after which he bought a muffler and some handkerchiefs. Camille had not once flushed, paled or otherwise betrayed herself. Nevertheless, that she recognized him he would have been willing to wager his right hand.

"Is there anything else?" she asked again.

"That is all."

While paying for the articles an idea suddenly occurred to him.

"Might not these purchases be sent to me?" he said.

"Certainly, monsieur. What address?"

He looked at her scrutinizingly while she composedly wrote in a large book. Then he said very distinctly, "Robert Maurier, M. D., 15 Rue Cujas."

"Cujas," she repeated tranquilly.

For a second he had the foolish hope that she would herself bring the packages, but he was speedily undeceived.

"The boy will deliver the order tonight or tomorrow morning."

"I shall count upon receiving them promptly," said he, "for I am quitting Paris."

She replied, with mechanical politeness, "Oh, they shall be sent in time!"

"Good day, monsieur."—Parisian.

Dominos In a Lion's Cage.

A game of dominos in a lion's cage was the novelty recently offered to the bewildered gaze of the visitors to a menagerie. The players were the "tamer" and a worthy citizen who, on the strength of a bet, had entered the habitation of the king of beasts. Seated quietly at a table which had been brought in for the purpose, the pair got on very well for a time, the lion watching their movements apparently with intelligent attention. He seemed, however, to arrive at the conclusion that the game was a poor business, after all, for instead of allowing the two men to finish it in peace he suddenly made a dash at the table and sent it spinning with the dominos in wild confusion into the air, much to the horror of the onlookers, who feared that a shocking catastrophe was impending.

The amateur, however, was not slow in taking the hint. On the contrary, he lost not a moment in bolting out of the cage, and the relief was general when he succeeded in putting the bars between himself and the demolisher of the table. The lion appeared to be a very magnanimous creature, for during the next performance he allowed a friend of the fugitive domino player to pay him a visit and actually condescended to accept from him a piece of meat presented as a propitiatory offering. As, after doing justice to the morsel, he began to regard the intruder with wistful eyes, and by other signs and tokens to manifest an inclination to make a closer acquaintance with him, the tamer promptly intervened and another strategic movement to the rear was executed, fortunately with success.—Paris Letter in Chicago Chronicle.

The Youthful Kaiser and Mr. Frith.

Although Professor Knackfuss is usually credited with assisting the kaiser in the production of his surprising pictures, the German monarch owes his earliest introduction to the mysteries of art to an English painter. The first time the kaiser handled a brush was at Windsor, when Mr. Frith was painting the picture of the Prince of Wales' marriage for the queen. All the royal personages gave sittings to the artist, and the kaiser, then a little 4-year-old prince, spent several mornings in the room where the picture was being painted. To keep the child quiet, Mr. Frith gave him some paints and brushes and allowed him to dabble on one of the unfinished corners of the canvas.

As the natural result of this very injudicious proceeding the prince's face was in a very few minutes covered with streaks of green, blue and vermilion. The sight of his smeared face terrified his governess, who begged the artist to remove the colors, and Mr. Frith, armed with rags and turpentine, had nearly completed his task when the pungent spirit found its way into a scratch upon the child's cheek. The future kaiser screamed with pain, assaulted the eminent painter with his fists, and hid himself under a large table, where he yelled until he was tired. Mr. Frith declares in his "Reminiscences" that the little prince showed a most unforgiving spirit and revenged himself afterward by sitting so badly that the painter failed altogether to produce a satisfactory likeness.—London Chronicle.

Reed's Sway In the House.

Those Republican members of the house who complain of Mr. Reed's tyranny are not discontented because the speaker poses as their leader. What they object to is Mr. Reed as the whole thing. They are tired asking one another the question, not "What are we going to do?" but "What is he going to do?"

The office of speaker has been completely revolutionized since Mr. Carlisle held it. Speaker Carlisle regarded himself purely as the organ of the house. He was the moderator of order simply; he the instrument, the house always the master. Mr. Carlisle was so careful of the rights of the house and of every member of it that at the slightest intimation of doubt as to the correctness of his decision he would himself ask to have the question submitted to the house. The individual rights of members were scrupulously respected by the speaker in recognition of the principle that any representative is the equal of the chair. Mr. Reed's philosophy is wholly different; so is his practice. He counts it a dull day in which he does not run over some one.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Jubilee at Stratford-on-Avon.

The queen's jubilee will be celebrated at Stratford-on-Avon by a unique Shakespearean procession, consisting of ten tableau cars representing scenes from the various plays. In addition there will be a water pageant on the Avon, old English sports, and the pretty ceremony of crowning the rose queen, to say nothing of the fireworks and illuminations and performances in the Memorial theater. The children are to be specially remembered. Two thousand of them will be invited to tea by the corporation.

Music as a Therapeutic Agent.

The St. Cecilia society of London has met with great success in carrying out its mission of treating hospital patients with music according to the nature of their ailments. Some points in the rationale of this treatment are brought out in a paper by Binet and Courtier. Major chords and discords quicken the breathing, especially discords. Minor chords retard it. All melodies, grave or gay, but especially gay, quicken the respiration and increase the action of the heart. Operatic pieces or those well known to the subject were the most effective in accelerating the action of the heart.

Summons.

In the superior court of the county of Fresno, State of California.

The California Savings and Loan Society, a corporation, plaintiff, vs. J. P. Koch, Robert Mack, E. B. Perrin, D. J. Guggenhime, E. M. Stieljes, Frank H. Short, C. H. Williams, Sarah A. Williams, The Fresno Land Company, a corporation, John Doe and Mary Roe, defendants.

Action brought in the superior court of the County of Fresno, State of California, and the complaint filed in the office of the clerk of said County. J. F. Cowdery, attorney for plaintiff.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA send greeting to J. P. Koch, Robert Mack, E. B. Perrin, D. J. Guggenhime, E. M. Stieljes, Frank H. Short, C. H. Williams, Sarah A. Williams, The Fresno Land Company, a corporation, John Doe and Mary Roe, defendants.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff, in the superior court of the county of Fresno, State of California, to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days, exclusive of the day of service, after the service on you of this summons if served within this county, or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree of this court for foreclosure of a mortgage, described in said complaint, made, executed and delivered, by said defendants, J. P. Koch and Robert Mack, to said defendant, E. B. Perrin and one J. B. Randol, on the 9th day of December, 1890, to secure payment of a promissory note of same date described in said mortgage and complaint, made, executed and delivered by said defendants, Koch and Mack, to said defendant, Perrin and said Randol, payable four years after date, for the sum of $13,000.00 with interest at the rate of seven—7—per cent per annum, interest payable semi-annually, and if not so paid to be compounded.

That said mortgage was recorded in Recorder's office, Fresno county, in Vol. 75 of mortgages, page 392, et seq., and affects that certain real property, situated in Fresno county, State of California, described as follows, to-wit:

Lots 212, 213, 214, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 143, 144, 147, 109, 110, 148, east ½ of 103, 205, 206, 207, 208, 201, east ½ of 183, east ½ of 184, containing together about four hundred and ten—410—acres as laid down and designated on the map thereof, entitled, map of Perrin Colony No. 2, which map was filed for record in the office of the county recorder of said Fresno county, on the eight—8—day of October, 1890, and is hereby referred to for further or more description.

Plaintiff alleges that on December 27th, 1890, said Randol, assigned all of his interest in said note and mortgage to said defendant Perrin and thereupon said defendant Perrin, assigned said note and mortgage to plaintiff herein, who is still the holder and owner of said promissory note and mortgage.

That at the request of defendant E. B. Perrin, and defendants J. P. Koch and Robert Mack, plaintiff released the west half of number two hundred and thirteen, all of lots (201, 207, 208, 143, 181) two hundred and one, two hundred and seven, two hundred and eight, one hundred and forty-three, and one hundred and eighty-one, have been released from the operation of said mortgage.

Plaintiff alleges that there is now due and unpaid on said promissory note and mortgage to plaintiff, the sum of $13,000 00 with interest thereon from December 9th, 1890, at the rate of seven—7—per cent per annum, all in gold coin of the United States.

Plaintiff further alleges that the value of the property described in said mortgage is not sufficient to discharge the amounts due to the plaintiff upon said promissory note and that said property produces an income from rents which should be equitably applied in satisfaction of said debt; and that it is necessary, in order to protect the plaintiff, that a receiver of said property should be appointed in this action to collect the said rents and to apply them as this court may direct by its decree in this action.

Plaintiff prays for judgment against defendants J. P. Koch and Robert Mack, for $13,000.00 in gold coin and interest thereon at seven—7—per cent per annum from December 9th, 1890.

That a receiver be appointed by the court in this action upon the filing of the complaint, or at any time thereafter upon plaintiff's motion to take possession of said premises, and to receive the rents, issues and profits thereof, and to apply them as this court by its final decree may direct.

That the usual decree be made for the sale of said mortgaged property for gold coin of the United States by a commissioner appointed by this court, according to law and the practice of this court; that the proceeds of such sale be applied to the expense of such sale, and to the payment of the judgment in this action; that all of said defendants and all persons claiming from or under them or from or under either of them subsequent to the execution and recording of said mortgage as aforesaid, be barred and forever foreclosed of and from all right, claim or equity of redemption in said described mortgaged real property, and every part and parcel thereof.

That the plaintiff or any other party to this action may become the purchaser at said sale. That a proper and sufficient deed of conveyance of said real property when so sold be executed to the purchaser, and that said purchaser be let into the possession of such real property and for judgment against the makers of said note for any deficiency. And for such other and further relief in the premises as shall appear to be meet and agreeable to equity, as will more fully appear by reference to said complaint.

And you are hereby notified, that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in said complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Superior court of the county of Fresno, state of California, this 11th day of December, 1890.

GOWNS FOR SUMMER

De Gaspari Rosa e Torta of Turin, Italy,

SPEAKS OF COOL COSTUMES

Elegance and Coolness Combined in Warm Weather Wear—Grass Linens and Lawns.

Turin, June 29, 1897.

The season stands in its zenith like the sun whose hot rays have driven all who are fortunate to be able to escape, into the campagna, where our fashionables spend the day in true Italian "dolce-far-niente," and leave their protecting walls only when the shades of evening fall and cooling zephyrs dispel the lingering heat and artificial light enhances the beauty of lustrous dark eyes and raven tresses and enchanting gowns.

Lightness and airiness is the "parole" for summer wear, and how delightfully grass linens and lawns fulfill this purpose. They come in great variety of design, plain or striped with dainty colored silks or embroidered in various patterns, and often elaborately spangled or beaded. Fine sheer grass lawn is to be worn over daintily shaded glace silks, many of which are first accordeon pleated. A graceful gown of very fine grass lawn, having a pale mauve satin stripe running through it, shows two ecru Van Dyke point collars as were much worn last year, utilized in a novel way to fall over the shoulders and define a sort of round yoke on the full blouse bodice of striped grass lawn over a lining of mauve taffeta glace. The full puffed elbow sleeve of lawn is unlined and finished at the elbow with a band of folded mauve satin ribbon and graceful bow. High-standing butterfly bows of the same ribbon decorate the shoulders, and the folded collar with its full loops and bows at the back is likewise made of mauve satin ribbon. The fullness of the blouse is confined at the waist by a wide folded belt of ribbon, and the hips are made to appear larger by large full ribbon loops ending on both sides of the front gore of the skirt in long, wide streamers of different lengths, which form the only decoration on the plain, rather close-fitting skirt of mauve-striped grass lawn over a foundation lining of mauve taffeta glace. A large, black picture hat with drooping plumes, lends an artistic finish to this useful costume, so easily constructed and which will be found suitable for all occasions.

Instead of the taffeta or silk lining on which flowered or dotted muslin dresses are usually mounted, plain printed batiste or lawn is now much used. It certainly makes a cooler and often a daintier gown, if a less rich looking one, and these soft linings come in all pretty shades of pink, lilac, green or other tints that form the backgrounds of figured muslins.

The wild craze for materials heat-pressed in the manner known as sun pleating, accordeon pleating, etc., extends even to bicycle skirts, which prove to be more useful than ornamental, and to the newest and most expensive underwear. The effect is almost invariably charming when the garment is new, but alas! for the practicability of it. Heat-pressed garments are not meant to be sat upon, as the straight folds of light material is easily marred and an unexpected rain or a few days of humidity detracts all their beauty and leaves them limp and sagging rags. As trimmings for flounces, rosettes, etc., the heat-pressed pleatings are far more serviceable and exceedingly soft and dainty. An exquisite model is made up of richly blending red and green Japanese silk, with yoke of emerald green velvet, pleated flounces of black mousseline de sole and rich black moire ribbon. The blouse-bodice closing at the back, is draped over a lining of red satin. The back of the bodice is quite close-fitting, except for a wide box-pleat in the center, to conceal the fastening. The green velvet yoke comes only to the chest and does not extend to the back. Full heat-pleated flounces of black mousseline de sole, edged with narrow silk, machine-made lace and decorated with two rows of black satin baby ribbon, border the yoke in front and pass over the shoulders forming full epaulettes over the slightly puffed upper arm of the silk sleeve. Very narrow pleated flounces also decorate the yoke in vertical cascades, which alternate with narrow strips of gold spangled passementerie. The emerald green velvet collar is striped with spangled passementerie and is trimmed at the back with full pleated flounces. Wide black moire ribbon forms the folded belt and large butterfly bow. The Japanese silk skirt is cut quite narrow and lined throughout with red satin. The back widths are fulled into two large box-pleats. The front gore is defined at both seams by two gathered heat-pleated widths of spangled, black mousseline de sole, confined below the knee by bows of black moire ribbon. Five pleated lace-edged flounces of black mousseline de sole run diagonally from the hem of the front gore over the sides ending at the back under the box-pleats.

We illustrate, to-day, a model for an elegant promenade costume for a young lady. It is to be made of sheer white crepe de chine over mauve and gold changeable taffeta. The skirt is quite plain without any trimming to mar the exquisite light effects produced by the combination of colors and textiles. The full blouse bodice composed of the same materials, has a short Zouave jacket of mauve velvet, elaborately embroidered with silver sequins and crystals and lined with taffeta. The deep epaulettes of mauve velvet embroidered to match the Zouave jacket and likewise lined with taffeta, lend additional fullness to the upper arm of the slightly fulled leg-o'-mutton sleeve of crepe de chine over taffeta and finished at the wrist by a very small cuff of mauve velvet. The folded belt and standing collar are also of mauve velvet and a bow of crepe de chine trims the back of the neck. A chatelaine of chased silver with amethyst settings goes well with this costume. It is the fad of ultra fashionables to attach to their chatelaines such a number of trinkets all more or less useful and some very ornamental, that the fair wearer's approach is quite noticeable by the merry tinkling of her ornaments, reminding one of an Indian nautch dancer.

HOW MORRISSEY AND SCOVEL BEAT A PAT STRAIGHT AND THREE ACES.

Raises at the Proper Time and of Correct Amounts Did the Trick—Morrissey Got $1,000 Out of the Pot, Scovel Got the Rest and the Others Got Left.

The passing of the Crystal saloon. Gone, but not forgotten. Erected in 1798. Razed only a few days ago. The Crystal saloon, which adjoined the Frear House, was for over 40 years the principal and about the only rendezvous for sporting men in this city. It was the resort of such well known men as John Morrissey, John Daly, Colonel Jim Scovel and others. Stories have been told of plays of faro when the limit was the sky, and where the checks were piled on a card as high as the ceiling.

Many good stories are told of big games played in the Crystal. One of the best is of the great poker game in which the late John Morrissey and Colonel Jim Scovel were the two important players. It was nearly 30 years ago. It was a bleak December night. This was before Scovel was sent to the United States senate by the Jerseyites, and when Morrissey was at the height of his prominence. It was a six handed game of draw. The game had been lagging on for three hours without any excitement. Morrissey was about $3,000 winner. Scovel was a loser of about half that much. The play which made this story came up about 2 o'clock in the morning. John was the dealer, Scovel sat to his left and was the first man to speak. It was a $20 "jack."

"Pass," said the big colonel, never looking at his hand.

The next man did the same as Scovel, but the player who followed him opened it for $120, the size of the pot. The next man stayed, the next passed, and when it came to Morrissey he tilted it $360. It was now Scovel's turn. There was $820 now in the center. Scovel was a poker player of the old school. He would lay down fours as quickly as the amateur would draw four cards to an ace when it cost $100, and he would play a three card flush if the pot was worth winning at all. Scovel looked at his hand when Morrissey had finished putting in the checks. He stared at John for a few moments, all the time fumbling his checks, and then in a cool way went down in his inside pocket and pulled out a large wallet.

"I'll raise you $810," Jim said.

The man who had opened the pot saw both raises, for he sat with a nice pat straight in his hand, and the next fellow put in $1,170. Morrissey was nonplused when it came to him. It was at least 15 minutes before he put in the $810.

"I'm in so much I might as well stay," he remarked, as he picked up the deck. "How many, Jim?"

"Three," answered Scovel, "and see that they are good ones."

"Oh, I've got you beat," chirped John, as he dealt out the required number.

"I'll play these," was the answer of the man who held the pat straight.

"That's a good thing," said Morrissey, looking in a surprised way at the man.

"Give me two," was the order of the next man, and he got them.

"Well, I only want one, and I don't need it at that," remarked Morrissey, as he took the top card.

The man who had opened was one of those fellows who are always afraid of a one card draw, and he merely chipped 25 cents. The next man was there with three aces cold and he threw a $50 greenback in the center. It was now Morrissey's turn. He had "skinned" his hand off two or three times.

"Five hundred better," said he, without moving a muscle.

During the play Scovel had been leaning back in his chair watching his opponents. The "gallery," which is the name used for the spectators who congregate around the table, was more excited than the players. The center of the table was piled with bills.

"It seems like a shame," exclaimed Scovel, "but I'm going to raise you $2,500, John," and suiting the action to the word he counted off that amount in bills and threw it in the middle.

The man with the pat straight passed without hesitating, and the next with three aces concluded that his hand wasn't worth $3,000 more, so he, too, dropped out.

"How about splitting the pot, Jim?" asked Morrissey.

"Never," replied Scovel, "but I'll let you take your last raise out."

"Make it $1,000," said Morrissey, "and I'll go you."

"All right," said Scovel. "What'd you have?"

"A lulla-pa-loosa," answered big John, and threw his hand to Scovel. There was a jack of hearts and a deuce, tray, four and five of diamonds.

Scovel turned his hand over and showed the jack of diamonds, queen of hearts, jack and seven of clubs, and ace of spades; he had a solitary pair of jacks. Talk about consternation. The man who had passed on three aces made the air blue, and the pat straight fellow fell unconscious. Scovel treated the house and took a cab to Albany. "If I had only thought you was bluffing," said Morrissey, "I'd have sent you to Philadelphia on a freight train."

There was $8,071 in the pot, which Scovel won with a pair of jacks.—Troy Observer.

HANNA HARASSED.

Between Place Hunters and Ohio Campaigns He Finds Life a Burden.

There is no rest for Mark Hanna. Three years ago he started his campaign for the nomination of McKinley for president. That was a comparatively easy task, as the people were with him. Yet Mr. Hanna put in two years of solid work to make sure of success. Last year he had upon his shoulders the burden of a great campaign. No sooner was that victory won than Mr. Hanna found himself surrounded by office seekers. For seven months they have been after him day and night. Now Mr. Hanna has another big job on his hands. It is to carry the state of Ohio at the fall elections and save his own seat in the senate. Is it any wonder that Mr. Hanna is getting tired?

Mr. Hanna moves his office from room to room and from floor to floor in the Arlington hotel, where he lives. As soon as the office seekers locate him in one room and overrun him he moves between midnight and daylight to quarters far away in the big house, down stairs or up stairs. In a day or two the crowd has found him out, and there is nothing to do but to pull up stakes and move again.

"Roessle," said Hanna to his landlord one day recently, "I wish you would build an addition to your hotel. I have now been in about all the rooms in the house, and I don't know where I am to go next."—Chicago Times-Herald.

SUMMER CAMPING

—AT—

Wawona.

The Wawona Hotel Co. are offering great inducements to campers for the coming summer months. They have erected platforms on which tents can be pitched, which they furnish free of charge. Private camp grounds are also reserved for families. A dancing platform has also been erected. Among the many attractions around Wawano is the Lake, which has been enlarged, where boats can be had without cost. Signal Peak 8 miles, Big Trees by trail 4 miles, Chinualno Falls 6 miles and but 26 miles to Yosemite Valley. Trout fishing has been greatly improved by the millions of young trout placed in the streams by the Wawona State Fish Hatchery. The store is under the new management of E. N. Baxter, where groceries can be bought at Fresno prices, freight added. The meat market is under the management of George H. Bernhard, where meat can be had at prices to suit the times. Hay and grain will be furnished to campers at cost.

$25 TO CHICAGO.

$23 to St. Louis and Memphis

$22.50 to Kansas City.

These exceptionally low rates for first-class tickets will be put into effect by the

Santa Fe Route

Shortly, and will last only a little while. The same rates will apply west-bound for a few days. If you wish to go East, or send for friends in the East, now is your opportunity. These rates are made on account of the Christian Endeavor Convention in San Francisco, and will not be in effect long.

Remember that the SANTA FE ROUTE is the only direct line making these rates to and from Fresno. Also bear in mind the superior car service afforded by this line between California and the East. Both Pullman Palace and Tourist Sleepers through to Chicago daily. Owing to the average altitude of the line, it is the coolest of all in summer.
